U. S. Grand Jury Action Surprises

Corporations Charged With Coercing Dealers, Loan Companies.

By the United Press.

South Bend, Ind., May 27.—A Federal grand jury late today indicted 86 executives of the Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corporation and Chrysler Corporation and affiliated finance companies for alleged violation of the Sherman antitrust act.

United States District Attorney James R. Fleming announced that Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co.; Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of General Motors administration committee; William Knudsen, president of General Motors, and Walter G. Chrysler, president of Chrysler Corporation, were among those indicted.

The grand jury returned three separate indictments charging the manufacturers and companies with violation of antitrust laws through coercion of automobile dealers and discrimination against independent finance companies.

List of Indicted.

Fleming said the individuals indicted would be taken into custody by Federal officers in the various cities. He said their bond would be fixed shortly. Conviction on the charges carries a fine of not more than $5,000 and a sentence of not more than one year imprisonment.

The Grand Jury had been in session since a week ago last Monday. The jury report was totally unexpected as Fleming previously and announced that the investigation would take at least six weeks.

Those indicted included 43 executives of Chrysler Corporation, and its finance company affiliate, Commercial Credit Corporation, 23 executives of General Motors and its finance affiliate, General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and 20 executives of Ford Motor Co. and its finance affiliate. Fleming said Ford automobiles were financed through the Universal Credit Corporation.

Those indicted, according to Fleming, included:

Beauty Seized In Louisiana As Foreign Spy

By the United Press.

New Orleans, May 27.—A pretty, young brunette, suspected of being a foreign spy because she photographed United States Army air bases and wrote regular letters to Germany, tonight was held incommunicado for a secret hearing before immigration authorities.

The girl had an authentic British passport, authorities said, giving her name as Sylvia May Bradshaw, 23, of London.

"But she doesn't look or talk like an Englishwoman," said District Immigration Director Eugene Kessler.

She was arrested in Shreveport, on telephoned instructions from Washington, and brought here.

Her landlady, who noticed the girl often carried a camera and learned she wrote thrice weekly to Germany, reported her.

Federal officers said the girl admitted making pictures of Barksdale Field, huge Army air base at Shreveport, and other military posts and ports in this country.

Kessler said the girl spoke fluent French and German and appeared to be highly educated. She said she had worked as a governess in California and then had hitch-hiked eastward. She obtained a room in Shreveport in exchange for acting as governess.

The pretty young foreigner entered this country 11 months ago at New York on a visitor's passport. She was charged here with violating terms of entry by working in the United States. Hearing was set for 10 a. m. Monday, but immigration officials believed it later would be

Czechs Allege Spying, Send Nazis Protest

Refuse to Cease Their Warlike 'Protective' Preparations.

By the United Press.

Prague, May 27.—Czechoslovakia today protested formally to Germany against "violation" of her frontiers by German military airplanes and added allegations of Nazi espionage involving the purported discovery of 120 machine guns at Aussig.

Aussig is an important center of Czechoslovakia's militant Sudeten German minority, over whom Adolf Hitler has proclaimed a "protective" interest.

Prague officials tonight said reserve military forces would be maintained under arms "as long as the situation requires" to protect the nation's security, indicating they believed the threat of hostilities still smouldered along the German-Czech frontier.

Espionage Charged.

It was revealed that Dr. Vojtech Mastny, Czech minister to Berlin, in his protest lodged with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, pointed not only to 34 instances of alleged violation of Czech territory by German planes but cited cases of espionage.

In connection with the espionage charges, it was announced a Czech of German nationality was arrested today at Hartmanitz in western Czechoslovakia while attempting to cut a cable line between two units of Czech troops. The prisoner was said to have named the "instigator" of the plot, who has not been apprehended.

Prague's protest was made as Dr. Ernest Eisenlohr, German minister, presented Germany's fourth formal protest within four days against purported violations of the frontier by Czech military planes.

Hitler Calls Military Chiefs.

Prague, asserting there was evidence of 22 German aviation violations in the past few days, including two today, said its charges were "more serious" than those of Germany.

Simultaneous with the government's refusal to demobilize its reserves and abandon its warlike "protective" preparations, it was reported from Berlin that Hitler had summoned the chiefs of his armed forces into consultation.

William Strang, chief of the central European department of the British foreign office, who came to Czechoslovakia to obtain a confidential report on the outlooks for peace or war, set out today for the Sudeten areas of Bohemia on a tour of inspection.

Police Withdraw As Truce Follows Akron Strike Riot

Akron, Ohio, May 27 (AP).—Extra police withdrew tonight and a "normal" picket line was ordered established at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. under a strike truce arranged by a National Labor Relations Board official.

Only enough police were to remain to regulate traffic at the 2-mile-long plants, where 80 persons were injured, one seriously, in rioting early today.

The truce apparently averted a city-wide transportation strike.

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., May 27.—Representative Jerry O'Connell (Democrat), Montana, bitter foe of Mayor Frank Hague, made a brief appearance at Pershing Field tonight but was hustled away by police before he could deliver a speech assailing the State Democratic leader.

O'Connell declared he was "handled very brutally."

Taken by automobile to a police station two blocks from the stadium, he was closeted for a few minutes with high police officials and then taken to the Journal Square station of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad.

From there he took a train to Newark where he told his story before taking a train for Washington.

"We're taking him home," said Public Safety Director Daniel Casey as he left the Central avenue station with O'Connell. "He wanted to go home. He's perfectly satisfied. He says the police treated him fine."

The action resulted in the hardest fighting this correspondent has seen in 10 months at the front with Chinese armies north of the Yangtse River and around Shanghai, and appeared to have given Maj. France Sends Ships to Guard Coast Waters

Augments Border Patrols; Town's Bombing Blamed on Franco Forces.

By the United Press.

Perpignan, France, May 27.—The French government tonight dispatched warships to coastal waters, reinforced frontier patrols and anti-aircraft batteries pending an investigation of the bombing of Cerbere on the French side of the Spanish border.

Mayor Julien Cruzel of Cerbere informed Premier Daladier that "Italo-German airplanes" of the Spanish insurgents were responsible for last night's attack on the town during a fiesta in the market square.

Two persons, including a Frenchman, were wounded and three houses were damaged when two seaplanes, believed from the insurgent air base at Majorca in the Balearic Islands, dropped 15 bombs near the railroad station—three-quarters of a mile from Spanish soil—and smashed several railroad coaches.

Cedillo Flees As Plane Is Forced Down

Later Predicts Revolt in North in Short-Wave Broadcast.

By the Associated Press.

San Luis Potosi, Mexico, May 27. Federal government aviators today forced down an airplane carrying Rebel Gen. Saturnino Cedillo. Cedillo, whose peasant army has clashed with federal troops for a week, fled with five followers. Troops virtually surrounded the site of the forced landing, at Estanzuela, about 9 miles northwest of here.

Reports reached San Luis Potosi the rebel chieftain had been captured, but they were not confirmed officially. Cedillo left behind five suitcases. Federal troops under Gen. Lucas Gonzalez set out immediately to trail the fugitives.

[Later, Gen. Cedillo, the United Press reported, broadcast from a portable short-wave set he was able to take with him when he escaped. He was quoted as saying a rebellion would break ou in the northern section of the republic "within a few days."

[Cedillo claimed the revolution had spread throughout San Luis Potosi and Guanajuato, and that many outbreaks had occurred in the Jalisco and Michoacan states. At the same time he claimed his followers had not fought with Government troops "because we have no quarrel with the army."—Editor's Note.]

Cedillo, rightist foe of President Lazaro Cardenas' radical Mexico-for-Mexicans program, was said to have made a hurried takeoff when a federal force surprised him and a band of his followers in the rugged Huasteca hill country of San Luis Potosi state.

Twelve federal airplanes started in pursuit from San Luis Potosi and when news of the forced landing was received here infantrymen were sent out in trucks. The troops reported back that they found Cedillo's plane abandoned.

A government spokesman said capture of the Cedillo plane spelled the last of the rebel leader's two-plane air force. They said his other plane was seized earlier in the week by federal troops.

Cedillo, head of Mexico's last private army, long has been at odds with Cardenas, from whose cabinet he resigned last August as secretary of agriculture in protest of the President's agrarian program.

The huge, part-Indian general then retired to his pretentious Las Palomas estate in San Luis Potosi state, refusing an army appointment because of what he claimed was poor health.

Upon receiving reports of an impending uprising in the central Mexican state, Cardenas on May 18 personally led an army of 11,000 men into San Luis Potosi to maintain order.

Roosevelt Lets Tax Bill Become A Law, Unsigned

Assails Reopening Of Old Loopholes

Harrison Plans Answer Today to Address at Arthurdale.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Staff Correspondent.

Arthurdale, W. Va., May 27.—President Roosevelt today chose this little town of subsistence homesteaders to announce his refusal to sign a $5,300,000,000 tax bill that he said permits a wealthy few to avoid payment of legitimate taxes.

But the bill, modifying the principle of the undivided profits tax and restoring capital gains levies to a flat-tax basis, will be permitted to become law at midnight tonight without his approval.

It was the first time since he has been President that he has chosen that rarely used course, as against signature or outright veto. He said he did so because the bill contains good features "that ought to become law," as well as "undesirable features."

A critical fire was directed at the Senate for modifying changes forced into the more drastic House capital gains and undivided profits tax provisions. These were the changes he thought "undesirable."

[In Washington, Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, promptly announced he would reply to the rebuke today.]

Wife Draws First Honors.

The President's tax bill decision was disclosed at commencement exercises at the Arthurdale High School, school center of Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite homestead project—Reedville—rechristened Arthurdale a year ago.

Mrs. Roosevelt had arrived the day before. She was on hand to greet the President as his train puffed into the little-used Reedsville station at 9:10 a. m. A banner across the main street shouted in huge letters: "Welcome, Mrs. Roosevelt." Then in smaller lettering on either side was added: "President and Party."

An automobile tour of the adjoining Arthurdale project preceded the afternoon speech. There had been a visit at the Arthurdale Inn, the community center, the co-operative dairy farm, the shirt factory running full blast and the vacuum cleaner plant now virtually shut down by the recession. Trim little frame, cinder block and stone homes on five-acre plots had passed in review. And the President had made a personal call on Clarence Degolyer, plant craft foreman, whose wife and 11 children hold the Arthurdale big-family cup.

Tax Evaders Scored.

It was in this setting, which the President said was only "a beautiful dream" until the Government five years ago "stepped in and started to make the dreams come true," that Mr. Roosevelt launched another attack on tax avoidance by the wealthy, and called on Congress to improve "the Federal tax system as a whole in the light of accepted principles of fairness."

Thirteen comely high school graduates, an auditorium packed with 2,000 homesteaders and visitors, and other hundreds before loud speakers outside, vociferously applauded his tributes to Arthurdale as a successful experiment in "bettering the social conditions of the nation out of our taxes." They sat uncomprehendingly silent through a more technical discussion of the highly complex undivided profits and capital gains taxes.

The wildest demonstration greeted his announcement that "I'm going to let the act go into effect at

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, drafted yesterday for introduction in the Senate a resolution calling for a sweeping senatorial investigation of alleged political activities within the Works Progress Administration.

King cited charges that threats had been made to deny relief to those who refuse to vote "for certain candidates for public office or certain public policies."

King's announcement followed a proposal by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, to eliminate a $985,000,000 PWA item in the pending relief and public works bill.

Byrd described the PWA allotment as "pump priming" and said

Dionne Quintuplets 4 Today; End of Public Career Studied

Callander, Ontario, May 27 (Canadian Press)—The Dionne quintuplets will be four years old tomorrow and there were signs tonight they soon might be shielded from the wonder that never has ceased since their birth.

The four-year mark in their lives has brought renewed consideration by their guardians of whether it would be wise to withdraw the little girls from their public and give them a chance to grow up as other youngsters of their age do.

Indications the guardians were leaning toward a policy of sheltering their charges more than in the past were seen in the arrangements for tomorrow's birthday celebration. It is to be a quiet affair without the international broadcasts that have marked their previous anniversaries.

There are two schools of thought on the upbringing of the quintuplets among psychologist advisers.

One believes the girls never can hope to lead normal lives and that they must learn to stand in the limelight and like it. It reasons that if they live sheltered lives until they are adolescents the shock may be damaging when they realize they are unusual beings.

Wait, says the other. At least for several years make their lives as normal as possible. Keep from them everything that would tell them they are different from other children. Then, as they grow older, teach them gradually that they have a place in public affection and some day must assume responsibilities.

This advice seems to have prevailed in the plans for tomorrow's celebration.

Sure Cures for Pink Elephants Are Temporary Guests of Zoo

To cure that man of the drinking habit, offer him a couple of weak beers and then conduct him to any of the several new animals which arrived at the Zoo yesterday.

At his first glimpse of the bird that looks like a Louisiana bullfrog he is a cinch to demand a pledge and a fountain pen tout de suite.

Better rub it in, though, and lead him to the small-mammal house for a terrifying look at the three lion marmosets (though he need not be told there is more than one)—the species of monkey with the head of a lion.

If you think he's had enough, well and good, otherwise make him get an eyeful of the prehensile-tailed porcupine from South America and the three beige-colored gibbons—mother, father and Peewee.

Even Director William M. Mann, whose eyes have gazed upon rare and unusual animals by the hundred, was excited over yesterday's arrivals. The frog mouth, a bird related to the whip-poor-will, especially attracted his fancy.

The queer specimen, a native of Australia, is about the size of a large pigeon but resembles no bird as much as it does a bullfrog. It is a deep bluish color and rather sluggish.

The lion marmosets have golden hair and seemed to get along nicely with the red ouakari monkey in whose cage they were placed. They are from the Upper Amazon River.

A sad, introspective chap is the Amazonian porcupine, whose prehensile tail enables him to hang head down from a limb and do other tricks which relatively few mammals possess.

State Employes Held Ruined in U.S. Tax Ruling

U. S., 11 States to Confer on Retroactive Effect of Income Levy.

Foreseeing "ruination" of many State employes through retroactive income taxation as a result of the Supreme Court decision in the New York Port Authority case, officials of 11 States will confer with Treasury officials on the problem next week.

The Supreme Court held that salaries of members of the Port Authority were subject to Federal income taxes. As a result, numerous classes of State employes, it was held yesterday, might be assessed back taxes for 12 years, plus interest. The law firm of Clark & LaRoe announced the conference for next Wednesday.

Conference Tuesday.

The court ruling brought under the Federal tax structure State employes not performing any function "essential to the continued existence of the State government."

John J. Bennett, New York attorney general, has arranged a preliminary conference of the State legal heads for Tuesday. He said they would meet on the following day with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and Undersecretary Roswell Magill, "with a view of agreeing upon a program for avoiding the retroactive effect" of the decision.

"Until the promulgation of the Supreme Court decision it had been the established rule, recognized by the Government itself," Bennett said, "that officers and employes of States and their political subdivisions, not engaged in proprietary functions, were immune from Federal taxation.

Demoralizing Effect.

"Hundreds of thousands of employes, relying on that rule, have not submitted returns. Technically construed, the decision might bring ruin to these people by assessing upon them back taxes for 12 years, plus interest. Such an assessment would, it is stated, be demoralizing not only to the affected employes but to the public service in which they are engaged.

"Among the classes affected would be departments of parks, State boards of conservation and development, State agricultural boards, bridge, highway, sewer and irrigation departments, departments of street cleaning and sanitation and other similar departments. The question has been raised whether the decision extends so far as to include school teachers, heretofore regarded as exempt."

Expected to attend the conferences are the attorneys general of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Massachusetts, Maine and Delaware.

Browning Creates Special Police in Foe's Stronghold

Memphis, Tenn., May 27 (AP).—Gov. Gordon Browning set up a special State police force here today, charging "citizens are being threatened, assaulted and intimidated" in this stronghold of his political enemy, E. H. Crump, Memphis leader.

M. N. Lowry, 39, former railroad special agent, was named acting chief of the new unit, created under a 1919 law never before invoked. Lowry immediately swore in 30 to 40 special officers and indicated 40 more might be added.

Sheriff Guy Joiner and Clifford Davis, Memphis police and fire commissioner, greeted the announcement with defiance.

"Should these so-called State police show up in this county carrying pistols," declared the sheriff, "I will put every one of them in jail."

Virginia Rains Aid Leaf Crop, Retard Cotton and Wheat

Richmond, Va., May 27 (AP).—General rains and showers in Virginia the latter part of this month have improved conditions for the transplanting of tobacco, but have been detrimental to the growth of cotton, wheat and corn, Henry Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, said today.

The dry weather of the first part of the month has been succeeded by a "wet spell," which has placed the total rainfall at Richmond since March 1 three-quarters of an inch above normal.

The gentle, soaking rains have been helpful to pastures and hay. They have been conducive on the other hand, to activity by cutworms, enemies of planted corn.

In addition the Chrysler indictment included the Chrysler Sales Corporation, Dodge Bros. Corporation, DeSoto Motor Corporation, Plymouth Motor Corporation and all commercial credit affiliates of the various companies.

In the General Motors indictment were named General Motors Sales Corporation, General Motors Assistance Corporation and General Motors Corporation of Indiana.

The Ford indictment also named the Universal Credit Corporation and other "branches and affiliates under the credit corporation," Fleming said.

Fleming said the three indictments were similar in "language" and involved "practically the same charges."

The grand jury investigation here marked the second attempt of the Federal Government to indict the manufacturers and companies.

The first attempt ended in failure at Milwaukee when Federal Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger dismissed the grand jury on grounds the Government and company representatives had "improperly" negotiated for a consent decree while the jury was in session.

The Milwaukee jury had been in session about three weeks, Fleming said.

United States Attorney General Homer S. Cummings complained to a Congressional judiciary committee against Judge Geiger's "arbitrary action." He asked investigation of the jurist's record.

Trial Seen in Fall.

By the United Press.

Justice Department officials said last night they were "thoroughly satisfied" with the indictment by a South Bend (Ind.) Federal grand jury of 86 motor company executives on charges of antitrust law violations.

Although refusing to reveal future plans, officials indicated the case may not be brought before a jury for trial until early fall. They said future action will have to await further conferences with Government attorneys at South Bend.

Neither Attorney General Homer Cummings nor Assistant Attorney General Thurman S. Arnold, the department's No. 1 "trust buster," was available for comment.

Northerners Fear Pay-Hr. Bill Trick

By the Associated Press.

Some House members expressed belief yesterday that Northern Democrats and Republicans who supported the revamped wage-hour bill merely because it would eliminate a competitive advantage held by Southern industries over Northern plants had been "sold down the river."

Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, who voted against the measure, said he had warned his colleagues in advance that the original bill's flexible provisions, which would have permitted lower wage standards in the South than in the North, had been eliminated in the revised legislation solely to attract their votes. He said that in conference "the concessions for the South would be restored."

Elections Official.

The electoral board of the Dominican Republic has declared valid and legal the election, May 16, of Dr. Jacinto B. Peynado and Dr. Manuel Troncoso de la Concha as President and Vice President of the Dominican Republic respectively, it was announced yesterday at the Dominican Republic Legation.

Banker Assails Administration Pump Priming

By the Associated Press.

Del Monte, Calif., May 27.—Orval W. Adams, president of the American Bankers Association, today said that if "pump priming" was to be renewed and Government spending continued, the load would fall heavily on persons with small incomes.

"Strange as it may seem, it is those with small incomes who carry a major part of the tax load," Adams told the California Bankers Association convention.

"More than half the tax money collected by the Federal Government is derived from invisible taxes. And if additional money is to be raised through an increase of direct taxes, in more than a fair degree it will have to come from the man with a small income."

"Back Where We Were."

Adams, executive vice president of the Utah State National Bank at Salt Lake City, said he deplored "the failure of pump priming to produce recovery.

"The result is that after five tollsome years we are back where we were in 1933 . . . except that we have added this additional debt load to the load already upon our shoulders and upon the shoulders of generations to come; that we have wasted the surpluses accumulated by industry which might have been and ought to be available for the expansion of industry, and that we have impaired the morale of our people, deadened their sense of independence, and lost to a considerable degree those habits of self-reliance and individual initiative which made this a great nation," he asserted.

"Broken Pump."

"Let me ask you this: When five years and $16,000,000,000 of accumulated deficits have gone to try out the experiment of pump priming, has not that experiment been given a fair test, and is it not time that we were told frankly that it has not succeeded? . . .

"Don't we all know that no amount of priming ever started a broken pump? Is it not time that a definite objective be decided upon? . . .

"Private industry is the pump to which all this priming has been applied, and it is the pump the Administration has been smashing for five years."

D. C. Consumers' Council Proposed

A resolution favoring the creation of a consumers' council to fight the high cost of living in the District was adopted last night by Anacostia Citizens Association, in session at the Anacostia Junior High School.

The group also went on record as favoring Otto J. Cass to succeed Commissioner George Allen as District PWA Administrator.

Shorter hours and better working conditions for the employes of Gallinger Hospital were urged by the association in another resolution. Copies of all resolutions will be sent the Commissioners and President Roosevelt.

Tempers Flare In New Parking Law Test Case

Tempers flared in Traffic Court yesterday during a test case of the new law prohibiting parking within 20 feet of building lines, and Judge Edward M. Curran threatened to hold an assistant corporation counsel in contempt of court.

The clash started when Prosecutor Milton Korman attempted to enter a nolle prosse in the case of Richard C. Popham, 46, of 1337 Meridian place northwest, accused of violating the 20-foot rule. But Attorney Michael Keogh, representing Keystone Automobile Club, which sponsored the test case, objected.

Judge Demands Order.

He contended the case had reached court and consequently couldn't legally be quashed. There followed a heated exchange of words, with Korman insisting upon the nolle prosse. Judge Curran rapped repeatedly for order.

Finally, the judge lost patience, ordered Korman to withdraw his intentions to quash and continued the case until 10 a. m. today.

Earlier, Keogh had offered a motion to have the charges dismissed by Judge Curran. The Keystone attorney argued the new rule is unconstitutional on grounds a building line is not defined in the traffic regulations.

George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Club, yesterday said his organization does not oppose the 20-foot rule, but on the contrary considers it "a good one in the interest of safety."

Question of Marking.

Because the District has failed to mark the 20-foot limit on the curb or pavement," he said, "motorists are placed at a serious disadvantage because not everyone can accurately judge the distance and in many cases a layman is unable to determine just where the building line is." Attacks on the new rule were joined also by American Automobile Association.

Guffey Foe Asks Patronage Rule For Philadelphia

Philadelphia, May 27 (AP).—The Evening Bulletin said today John D. Kelly would warn National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley he would retire as city chairman unless given full charge of Federal patronage in Philadelphia.

Senator Guffey, who backed the C. I. O.-Democratic ticket that lost the recent Pennsylvania primary, previously has distributed all such patronage.

If Kelly should leave his party office, Matthew H. McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor and co-leader of the city committee, might also give up the chairmanship of the finance committee of the State organization. Kelly and McCloskey have a pact that if one quits the other will follow.

They supported the victorious ticket that piled up a majority of 110,000 in Philadelphia for Gov. George H. Earle for the United States Senate nomination and 75,000 for Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, for Governor.

Civic Federation Urges Resident For Allen's Post

Appointment by the President of a bona fide resident of the District of Columbia as successor to Commissioner Allen was urged by the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting in the board room at the District Building, on motion of Woolsey W. Hall.

The federation endorsed the House-passed bill on retirement of firemen and policemen after 25 years' service on half pay and a bill amending the act for regulation of the practice of dentistry in the District.

Affiliation with the National Negro Congress, proposed by William A. Hunton, of Howard University, was made the subject of executive committee study.

The National Parks and Planning Commission was requested to construct a recreational area, at Sixth street and New York avenue northeast, for colored citizens, utilizing 20 acres of a Government-owned tract.

Privilege Tax Facing Battle in Appeals Court

Writ of Error Opens Way for Hearings by U. S. High Tribunal.

Stage for the first high court test of the District's newly re-enacted business privilege tax was set in the United States Court of Appeals yesterday when that tribunal granted a writ of error.

The suit is sponsored by William A. Neild and Emerson Sauerhoff, partners who conduct a wholesale produce market at 1205 Water street northwest.

They sued in Municipal Court for the recovery of $285 taxes which they had paid under protest. Judge Ellen K. Ready dismissed the suit. Appeal was taken to a three-judge tribunal which, under a new law, is empowered to pass on constitutional questions. The produce merchants again lost. Then they asked the United States Court of Appeals for a complete review of the question.

The company contended the tax imposed an undue burden on interstate commerce entering or leaving the District; that Congress lacks the power to so burden interstate commerce when it is acting as a legislative body only for the District; that the statute is retroactive, arbitrary, and confusing; that the tax is discriminatory as to firms in the same business.

Hearings on the arguments will be heard next week. The tax is $10 for the privilege of doing business and two-fifths of 1 per cent on the gross income.

Man With Job Guilty Of Asking for Relief

Constantine A. Anton, 48, a cook of 804 Ninth street northwest, was found guilty yesterday by Police Court Judge Hobart Newman on five counts of violating the District unemployment compensation act.

Judge Newman ordered Anton to pay $100 or serve 30 days in jail on each charge, after two restuarant owners told the court he was working for them when he applied for unemployment benefits.

Unitarians Elect Bates Moderator Of National Body

Boston, Mass., May 27.—Election of Sanford Bates as moderator of the American Unitarian Association was announced yesterday at the annual meeting of the association here.

The office of moderator is a new position under recent reorganization of the Unitarian Association. In many respects it is similar to the former position of president of the general conference of the association, last held by the late President William Howard Taft.

Bates, national authority on prison management, was until recently director of the bureau of prisons of the Department of Justice. At present he is executive director of the Boys' Clubs of America, with headquarters in New York City. He is a member of All Souls' Church in Washington.

House Group Hears Plea for Girls' School

D. C. Civic Leaders Also Ask $209,000 More for WPA Projects.

A deficiency appropriation which would permit continuation of the Children's Receiving Home and National Training School for Girls, and which would also include $209,000 for WPA and transient relief work, was urged yesterday by witnesses appearing before the House sub-committee on Deficiency Appropriations.

"Most of the witnesses heard were in favor of keeping the receiving home and the training school just as they are until something permanent is worked out for them," Representative Woodrum, chairman of the sub-committee, said:

Copeland Favors Study.

No provision for operation of the two institutions was made in the 1939 District supply bill. Various plans for disposal of the children have been advanced. Senator Copeland, member of the District Committee, has urged continuation of the homes pending an expert study of the District's delinquency and institutional problems.

The additional relief appropriation is being sought in order that WPA projects may be "sponsored" with $189,500 and $20,000 used in transient relief work. The regular relief fund of $900,000 cannot be "tapped" for these purposes without bringing additional hardships to relief clients, welfare and civic leaders told the committee.

District officials and Representative Ross Collins, chairman of the House sub-committee on appropriations, also are opposed to suggestions that money be taken from that allotted for District relief.

Meeting Wednesday.

Chairman Woodrum said his committee would meet next Wednesday to "mark up the bill."

Among civic and welfare workers appearing before the committee yesterday were Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary, Council of Social Agencies; Sidney Katz, secretary, Industrial Workers Union; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, League of Women Voters; Mrs. Eugener Meyer, Miss Anne P. Halliday, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Ufford and George Cleary, Catholic Charities.

6 Here, 1 in Va. Win Fortunes In Sweepstakes

Six persons from Washington and one from nearby Virginia were among 556 Americans whose tickets were drawn yesterday in Dublin, giving them at least $2,600 and chances for sudden fortune in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

Four of the tickets were on horses which are expected to start in the Epson Downs Derby, near London, June 1. Those on the first horse will win $150,000, minus what the Government takes in taxes, while those on the second horse will win $75,000, and those on the third horse, $50,000. Tickets cost $2.50.

Thomas C. Trescot, 25, controller of the Ambassador Hotel, drew a ticket on Golden Sovereign, the second favorite. When informed that he was one of ten Americansn with tickets on the horse, he took the news nonchalantly.

"I guess I'll establish a home for aged and infirm mice." It was the first time he had bought a ticket. Trescot is unmarried and lives with his mother at 1517 Thirteenth street northwest.

Draws Kybo.

"Now if you have any influence with horseflesh," he said, "you might use it to have my horse come in first, and then we'll talk about what I would do with the money. No, I'm not interested about second or third, every man wants his horse first."

His wife, who said she "didn't know much about that sort of thing," was unimpressed. Col. Kahle has been studying at the Army Industrial College for the past nine months and has one more month before he leaves on another assignment.

"I have a perfectly good automobile and wife, and no salesman of any kind need see me," he concluded.

Mrs. Lena Swan, 1706 North Troy street, Colonial Village, Arlington, Va., drew a ticket on Slip-On, another starter. She was greatly surprised this morning to learn of her good fortune, since her husband, William Swan, of the Farm Credit Administration, had bought it for her. She is employed at the Welfare and Recreation Association.

"I am so overwhelmed I hardly know what to say," she said. "If I didn't think I'd be swamped with calls I'd like to say my husband and I would use what money we get to buy a home. We have been looking forward to buying our own home for some time."

Mrs. Louise Clifton, of 601 I street northwest, drew the other ticket on a starting horse. Her horse was Unbreakable. She took out her ticket in the name of Beauty, the dog owned by Margaret E. Sipperley, landlady of the rooming house at which the Cliftons live. The Cliftons left town in the afternoon.

"Bill" Chow's a Horse.

Among the happiest to draw a ticket were Mr. and Mrs. Jack G. Grubbs, 942 Fourteenth street southeast. Grubbs bought a ticket in the name of "Bill," a shepherd dog he once owned, and drew a chance on Legal Fare.

Grubbs, who was located working at a gas station at Fifteenth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast changing a tire, let his beautiful brunet wife do the talking.

"I am so happy," she said, "I have been pinching myself all day to be sure it's true. We will use most of the money—that's right isn't it, Jack?—to buy ourselves a little house."

Mrs. Elizabeth Harris, of the Kennedy-Warren Apartment, drew a chance on Golden Eagle, a nonstarter, on a ticket she bought in the name of "Sugar." That is what her 5-year-old son, Frank, calls her. This was the first time she had taken out a ticket in that name.

"In the evening she said that she was "down to earth" after her first excitement. She hadn't thought much of what she would do with the money, but her son was already thinking in terms of a trip. Besides taking care of the child she helps her husband run a business which she and her mother own.

In Canary's Name.

Mrs. Hulda Enlow, 3013 Yost place northeast, bought a ticket in the name of her canary, Sweet, and won a chance on another non-starter, Timur. She didn't expect to have much pleasure from her winnings, however. She said she probably would go to the hospital for a "looking over" and might help out some of her relateves in Illinois who suffered in recent floods.

The prize fund for the sweeps amounted to $7,290,395, and for chances to win a portion of it Americans and others paid $11,920,295.

A total of 556 United States prize-winners—57 per cent of the total of 966 tickets drawn on 69 horses—included 203 on 24 probable starters in the derby. They held 39 tickets on the five favorites.

Oklahoma Regains U. S. Pension Aid

The Social Security Board yesterday restored to Oklahoma Federal grants for assistance to aged persons, dependent children, and the blind.

The grants had been cut off last March when the board found that the administrative machinery for the operation of the State social security plan did not conform to Federal standards.

The board ended its ban after the State's welfare commission had put into effect a program of "administrative reforms" suggested by officials here.

Suspect Cleared By Gaming Law

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday dismissed charges of operating a lottery and possessing lottery slips against Robert Huttenlock, 28, of the 1300 block Massachusetts avenue northwest, on the ground that racing slips do not come under the terms of the new gambling law.

Huttenlock was arrested May 13, after Policeman Benjamin F. Bean said he found racing slips in Huttenlock's automobile.

Happy Are These Ticket Holders

Harlan Miner Says Deputies Kidnaped Him

Stream of Witnesses Connects Defendants to Labor Violence.

By the United Press.

London, Ky., May 27.—Kidnaping was added today to the violence of which Harlan County deputy sheriffs stand accused in Federal court.

Miners of Harlan marched across the witness stand in the Federal Government's trial of 19 coal corporations and 44 individuals on charges of instigating terrorism against union men who tried to organize the 15,000 workers in the rich soft coal field.

Meeting Broken Up.

They told of being beaten up, of being driven from their homes by deputy sheriffs, of fleeing from a union meeting when the deputies arrived with an automobile loaded with shotguns and rifles. And, finally, as the afternoon wore on, there came to the witness stand a colored miner who said he had been routed out of bed by deputies, kidnaped and driven out of Harlan County with the warning that "if you ever come back we'll walk up behind you and blow your damn head off."

His name was Howard Williams and he once was vice president of one of the local unions in the Harlan field. He named two of the deputy sheriffs on trial here as the men who kidnaped him—Ben Unthank and George Lee. It happened, Williams said, on September 25, 1935.

"Finger" Put on Deputies.

On cross-examination the defense brought out Williams did not know Unhtank and Lee at the time he was kidnaped, but identified them later.

Miner after miner testified concerning a union meeting held near Evarts, Ky., a few days after the Wagner labor relations act became the law of the land. Garrison Mills, his brother, Elos, J. H. Anglain and Williams Gibbs all said that the deputies arrived at the meeting and began blowing the horns of their automobiles in an attempt to drown out the speakers. Finally, the witnesses said, the deputies got out of their cars, pistols in hand, and began hitting speakers and spectators. That broke up the meeting.

Anglain did more than testify. He got out of the witness chair and walked to the section of the courtroom where the 44 individual defendants sat behind a rope. Then he began "putting the finger" on the deputies.

When the witnesses had finished, they had linked virtually every one of the 22 deputies to some form of violence.

Waiter Here Stabbed In Union Argument

An altercation in Spanish between two waiters at the union headquarters, 429 Eleventh street northwest, was climaxed yesterday by the stabbing of Miguel Priz, 36, of 1332 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Barbour Enters Senatorial Race From New Jersey

Trenton, N. J., May 27 (AP).—Former Senator W. Warren Barbour, long an announced aspirant to the Republican nomination for the United States Senate, officially entered the race today when his campaign manager filed petitions of candidacy with the New Jersey secretary of state's office.

BARBOUR.

The former Senator seeks the seat held by John Milton, Jersey City Democrat, appointed to succeed A. Harry Moore when Moore resigned this year to become Governor.

Barbour first served in the Senate in 1931 to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Dwight W. Morrow. In 1932 he was elected to serve until 1937. He was defeated for re-election by Senator William H. Smathers, Atlantic City Democrat.

Jefferson Plan Decision Up to House Group

Hearings Close With Criticism of Pantheon Memorial Design.

The House Appropriations Committee held the fate of the bitterly disputed Thomas Jefferson Memorial yesterday as it closed hearings on a deficiency bill providing $500,000 for the project.

Spirited debate on the Pantheon design, with Chairman John J. Boylan of the memorial commission arguing for the appropriation and Chairman Kent Keller of the House Library Committee leading the opposition, coincided with the favorable reporting of a bill which would wipe out the commission headed by Representative Boylan.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the sub-committee handling the second deficiency bill, was noncommittal last night on the $500,000 item's chances for survival. Other members of the Appropriations Committee, not including Representative Boylan, predicted the allotment would be killed before the bill reaches the floor.

Boylan marshaled all Congressional members of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, except Senator McNary, minority leader, in behalf of the appropriation yesterday. They include Senators Lonergan and Elbert Thomas, and Representatives Smith, Virginia and Culkin, New York.

McNary is openly opposed both to the Pantheon type design, which was conceived by the late John Russell Pope, and to proposed location of the memorial on the southeast bank of the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park.

Others in the group which Boylan led to testify before the Woodrum sub-committee were Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee and Dr. Fiske Kimball, the memorial commission member whom Keller holds responsible for the body's dogged persistence in going forward with the Pantheon plan despite wide criticism.

Their testimony, as well as that of Representative Keller later in the day, was heard in executive session. The Library Committee chairman, however, is believed to have rested his case against the commission's tactics on the report accompanying the bill, which provides a fresh start for the moot project.

It pointed out that the House last year killed a $500,000 item to permit launching of work on the memorial and reminded that the design is violently opposed by the Fine Arts Commission.

Representative Phillips (Democrat), of Connecticut, yesterday introduced a bill authorizing the establishment of a planetarium here in memory of Jefferson. The Keller measure stipulates that the monument may be either utilitarian, like a planetarium or auditorium, or nonutilitarian.

Dinner Postponed By Sick Chicken Society of D. C.

The Sick Chicken Society, which was scheduled last night to hear an informal address by Gen. Hugh Johnson on the third anniversary of the Schechter decision, invalidating the NRA, postponed its first annual banquet.

Composed of men formerly connected with the NRA, the society will probably hold its dinner next fall, according to William Yost, chairman.

Death-Pact Boy, Ruled Insane in Killing, Freed

Judge Downs Orders Him Held for Hearing on Present Sanity.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27.—Donald Carroll, 16, was acquitted of slaying his 18-year-old sweetheart, Charlotte Matthiesen, tonight.

The verdict was not guilty by reason of insanity. When the foreman's first words—"not guilty"—were spoken, a burst of courtroom applause drowned the rest of the phrase. Judge Thomas Downs ordered the courtroom cleared.

Sanity Hearing Ordered.

The married, middle-aged jurors deliberated less than three hours. In the five-day trial, they had heard Carroll, son of a retired army officer, tell how he shot the 18-year-old daughter of a Jackson Heights neighbor in March, when their romance threatened to bring disgrace.

Judge Downs ordered the boy held for a hearing to determine if he now is sane and the lad was taken to Bellevue for observation.

Mrs. Matthiesen, who had fainted in the early uproar, ran across the center of the courtroom toward Donald, holding her arms wide and crying, "My boy, my boy!" but the officers took Donald quickly away.

Mrs. Donald Carroll, sr., sighed: "Now my prayers are answered. I'll have my little boys (the younger ones had been away in the country) back soon.

"I know my girl would like it (the jury's decision)," Mrs. Matthiesen sobbed.

Parents Are Denounced.

The parents of the slain girl have rallied to the boy's support. For this they were roundly denounced by Assistant District Attorney Joseph V. Loscalzo, who accused them of having "sold their souls."

Flushing angrily, the dead girl's father, Fred Matthiesen, declared during a recess that the prosecutor had "accused us of the greatest crime possible—selling our own child."

"When a citizen is insulted by a public official this way I don't give a rap for the country," he said. He went publicly to the boy's support within a few hours of his arrest last March, saying then that to punish young Carroll would not restore his daughter.

U. S. Officials Pay Pelphrey Tribute

Congressmen and Government officials yesterday joined in paying tribute to former Judge H. Pelphrey, 56, at funeral services conducted at the W. W. Chambers chapel by the Rev. Raphael H. Miller, pastor of the National City Church. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Judge Pelphrey was chief of the division of trial examiners of the Bituminous Coal Commission and former chief justice of the Texas Court of Appeals. He died Wednesday at Emergency Hospital.

The coal commission offices were closed until after the funeral. Honorary pallbearers included Senators Sheppard and Connally, of Texas, and the following members of the commission: Percy Tetlow, Pleas E. Greenlee, John C. Lewis, Walter H. Maloney and Thomas S. Haymond.

$40,000 Is Given To Capital Fund

John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank and chairman of the campaign committee of the Greater National Capital Committee of Washington Board of Trade, reported yesterday more than $40,000 had been subscribed. The committee's goal is $60,000.

New subscribers were reported by several divisional chairmen. Among those who spoke at the meeting were Francis G. Addison, jr., president of Board of Trade; Edgar Morris, chairman of the committee's executive board, and Claude Owen, John Saul and George Plitt, jr., former Board presidents.

Two Plead Guilty In Policy Racket

New York, May 27 (AP).—Two of the men named with James J. Hines, Tammany leader, in an indictment charging they operated the $100,000,000 policy racket once controlled by Dutch Schultz, pleaded guilty today to the 13-count indictment.

Arraigned before Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora, George Weinberg and Harry Schoenhaus, both of whom had pleaded innocent to an earlier indictment, changed their pleas for the superseding indictment which included Hines.

Assistant District Attorney Sol Gelb, who presented the cases in court today, asked Justice Pecora to defer sentencing Weinberg and Schoenhaus. Both men were paroled in custody of the district attorney.

Chicago Police Detain 14 in Brick Killing

Fireman's Wife Beaten to Death; Sister Sees Prowler Escape.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 27.—Fourteen were seized today in connection with the murder today of Mrs. Florence Johnson, 34, wife of a city fireman and mother of two children. She was beaten to death with a brick in bed in the sun parlor of her South Side Apartment. Her sister, Miss Margaret Whitton, aroused by muffled moans before dawn, saw the assailant escape.

Shortly afterward, an 18-year-old colored man, who gave his name as Thomas Crosby but later identified himself as Robert Nixon, was seized by a police squad four blocks from the building.

"I think he was the man," Miss Whitton told investigators but was not positive.

Sergt. Harold Fogary said Nixon's right hand and chin were scratched and his jacket flecked with blood. Nixon claimed he had been in a fist fight with another colored man.

Dr. Clarence Muehlberger, the coroner's chemist, announced the stains were human blood.

Thirteen other colored men were brought in for questioning.

Three fingerprints were found on the door leading to the death chamber.

Mrs. Johnson was the fifth woman bludgeoned to death under strangely similar circumstances in the last three years.

The husband, Elmer Johnson, learned of the slaying when he returned from a night on duty. He vowed:

Wampler Defense Refuses to Reveal Autopsy's Results

Attorneys for T. Morris Wampler, former Washington attorney, and his wife last night refused to disclose results of a second autopsy performed on the body of Charles Adams, 65-year-old handyman for whose death the Wamplers face trial on manslaughter charges before a Charles County (Md.) grand jury.

John Mudd, defense attorney, of La Plata, Md., said that "we are perfectly satisfied with the report," but gave no indication whether it might be the basis of an attempt to prove that Adams' death on the Wamplers' Fenwick (Md.) estate was not the result of blows on the head.

Robbery Suspect Held in $25,000

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday ordered Frank B. Waters held in $25,000 bond for grand jury action on charge of assault with intent to kill.

Waters was arrested in Parkersburg, W. Va., and turned over to Washington police in connection with the armed robbery and assault of James O. Stevens, Washington liquor dealer, March 6.

Communists Boast 87.5% Increase

New York, May 27 (AP).—Delegates at the tenth annual convention of the United States Communist Party, boasting an 87½ per cent gain in membership from 40,000 to 75,000 since 1936, elected a committee tonight to draft a platform for the 1938 elections.

The central committee reported that the 1937 income was $258,318 and expenditures $257,729. Largest disbursements were for communists in other countries. The German organization received $8,195.

Tax Bill Scored But Accepted By Roosevelt

Roosevelt

midnight tonight without my approval."

His words were carried through the country over a nation-wide radio hookup, ending all speculation on whether he would sign or veto the bill. Showing displeasure without blocking enactment, he chose a course on which he commented two years ago that the Administration did not do business that way.

The President's objections to the final bill were largely those he had voiced to the Senate's changes in the undivided profits and capital gains taxes in a letter to Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate conferees on April 13.

He objected to "so small" a penalty as 2½ per cent for corporations withholding dividends. The bill sets a minimum tax at 16½ per cent, with 19 per cent on those concerns that pay out none of their profits. The Senate had repealed the "penalty" altogether, substituting flat taxes, but the House had ranged the tax from 16 to 20 per cent.

"Good" Features Listed.

To the bill's final provisions on capital gains taxation, he protested that Congress had wholly eliminated the progressive tax feature, and taxed large and small capital profits at exactly the same rate. The House had provided a progressive rate, but the Senate had changed it to a flat 15 per cent tax.

The present bill taxes gains on assets held between 18 months and two years 20 per cent and taxes all gains realized after two years at 15 per cent. The President declared the fact that 80 per cent of capital gains "are profits made in the stock market" operates against these gains being used to develop new enterprise.

Introduces Daniels.

In one departure, he introduced "my old chief," Ambassador to Mexico Josephus Daniels, who was Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson Administration when Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary, and who accompanied him on the train to Reedsville.

The 1,133-acre plot that is Arthurdale was established by the Interior Department's old subsistence homesteads division in October, 1933, and later transferred to the Resettlement, now the Farm Security Administration. From the start, Mrs. Roosevelt took an interest in it and her efforts to attract industries to locate there drew some Congressional criticism when it was charged they would compete with plants making similar equipment. Of the 148 families, mostly former miners being rehabilitated, about 50 now are supported by emergency Government funds. Negotiations are under way to locate a new privately leased factory to take up this slack.

Big Family Congratulated.

Accompanying the President on his trip were his son, John; Ambassador Daniels, Senator Neely and Representative Randolph, of West Virginia; Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Dr. W. W. Alexander, head of the Farm Security Administration. They were joined at Reedsville by Gov. Homer A. Holt of West Virginia, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the latter two having motored here from Washington ahead of the President's party. Following the arrival of the President's train, Mrs. Roosevelt dedicated Morgantown's new colored high school and later passed out diplomas at the Arthurdale ceremonies.

One of the highlights of the President's tour of the project was his meeting with "Celebration," best milk producer in the settlement's Jersey herd. When a photographer asked the attendant to "bring that bull closer to the car," the President shot back "this is no bull; if you really want to know this is a West Virginia moose." Senator Neely commented he hoped "Jack Garner doesn't get his sights on it."

A long stop was made at the home of the DeGolyers, where the President greeted all of the available 11 children. Mrs. DeGolyer had a 2-year-old child with her. "Is that your next to last child?" asked the President.

"This is the last one," retorted DeGolyer emphatically.

At Keyser, W. Va., en route to Hyde Park, the President took advantage of an operating stop to address a crowd of several hundred gathered around the rear platform. The President said he hoped to take a day off "to run up here for some trout fishing" and added a kind word for Senator Neely and Representative Randolph.

From Arthurdale, Mr. Roosevelt went to his Hyde Park home for the week-end. He plans to return to Washington Tuesday.

New Election Issue

By the United Press.

Capitol circles quickly agreed yesterday that President Roosevelt's address on the revenue bill has made its tax changes an issue in the coming congressional elections. Legislators predicted the Administration will do all in its power to encourage the election of persons friendly to the President's views on this controversial subject.

Democrats and Republicans alike resented Mr. Roosevelt's criticism.

Speaker Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, shrugged and said that "it's all right with me if he wants to do that—the bill becomes a law." House Majority Leader Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, declined comment as did Representative Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, an important member of the tax-making Ways and Means Committee. Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, leader of the House liberals, approved and said the President "did exactly right."

Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, said "it was the only thing he could have done under the circumstances." Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, felt that "he took a wise course." Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, New Deal foe, complained that the President's criticism will offset the good that "the bill would have done."

To Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, and other Republicans, the President was seen as "passing the buck" on the issue to Congress. Senator Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan, said Mr. Roosevelt is "just as responsible for its enactment as if he had signed it, because he could have stopped it with a veto." Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, said, however, that the bill was "so good he didn't dare to veto it."

Roosevelt Declares Revenue Bill Is a Return to Tax Avoidance

By the Associated Press.

Arthurdale Homesteads, W. Va., May 27.—The text of President Roosevelt's address here today follows:

At last after many attempts I have succeeded in coming to Arthurdale—and I greet you as friends because you are Mrs. Roosevelt's personal friends and because I have heard so much about you.

Much has been written about you good people, about the conditions of life in certain towns in this part of the world and about what the Government has done here at Arthurdale. The Nation has heard about Scotts Run with its very poor conditions of life, and the Nation has heard about Arthurdale with its vastly improved conditions of life. But I think I voice the thoughts of you who live here when I say to the country over the radio that about the last thing you would want, would be to be publicized as some rare and special type of Americans.

Let me put it this way and I think and hope that you will agree with me when I say:

In 1933 the whole Nation knew that it faced a crisis in economic conditions but the Nation did not realize that it faced a crisis in social conditions. If anyone were to ask me what is the outstanding contribution that has been made to American life in the past five years, I would say without hesitation that it is the awakening of the social conscience of America.

As one part, and only one part, of the effort of your Government to improve social conditions, we undertook in dozens of places scattered over almost every part of the country, to set up, with the co-operation of the local people themselves, projects to provide better homes, a better chance to make both ends meet in maintaining a reasonably decent standard of life through the passing years.

Partial Failures Cited.

Many different types of projects were undertaken—some of them in wholly rural sections, some in cities, some in suburbs, some for industrial workers, some for miners, some, like Arthurdale, a combination of industry and farming. These projects represent something new and because we in America had no experience along these lines, there were some failures—not a complete failure in the case of any given project, but partial failures due to bad guesses on economic subjects like new industries or lack of markets.

On the whole, however, the percentage of good guesses in the average of these projects has been extraordinarily high, and for this success the principal part of the credit properly should go to the individual families who, themselves, have come to live in these new communities.

The lessons we have all learned will save a hundred times their cost in dollars as fast as Government or private capital—or as I hope, both—go on with the inevitable task of improving living conditions throughout the country and helping Americans to live as modern science has made it possible for them to live. The extra cost of pioneer ventures such as this represents development cost which we justifiably charge off as the inevitable cost of all progress—just as we have in the past charged off the huge Government share in the development costs of the railroads, the cables, the airplanes and the improved highways that made the automobile possible. But what is equally important to me, the lessons learned from this first bold Government venture will save human lives and human happiness as well as dollars in this march of progress ahead of us.

Addresses All Graduates.

This is a high school graduation and I am speaking just as much to you who graduate today as to your parents and your grown-up friends. You are citizens of tomorrow—not just this graduating class, but thousands of other high school graduating classes in every State of the Union.

When you, today's graduates, were of grade-school age we, your elders in the United States, were asleep at the switch and your Government also was asleep at the switch. For many years, other nations of the world were giving serious consideration to and taking definite action on social problems while we were pushing them aside with the idea that some day we would get around to meeting them.

We have heard of the ideals of ending child labor, of initiating a five-day week, of shortening working hours, of putting a floor under wages, of clearing slums, of bringing electricity into homes, and of giving families the chance to build or buy a home on easy terms of starting old-age pensions and unemployment insurance. But all these things were in the greater part a beautiful dream—a dream until Government, five years ago, tired of waiting, stepped in and started to make the dreams come true.

Government has done little more than to start the ball rolling. Government knows how much more there remains to be done. But Government hope, now that it has taken the first risks and shown the way, that private capital and businessmen will see how much it is to their own advantage—and profit—to keep the ball rolling—and keep it rolling so well that the inevitable wider improvement in American social conditions will come about in normal course of private enterprise without compelling Government to use large amounts of taxpayers' money to keep America up to date.

Many sincere people—good citizens with influence and money—have come to West Virginia mining towns in the past two or three years to see the conditions under which American families lived, conditions under which, unfortunately, many American families still live. Many of these people have come to see me after their visit to Scotts Run or similar places and have expressed to me their surprise and their horror at things they have seen. They have said: "I did not imagine that such conditions could exist in the United States."

They have wanted to help at the particular spot they have seen—but the lesson which I have found it difficult to get across to them has been the fact that they have seen only one spot or two spots—tiny, single spots on a map of the United States, a map which is covered over with hundreds and even thousands of similar spots. Unamerican standards exist by no means in a few coal towns only. They exist in almost every industrial community and they exist in very many of the farming counties of the country.

Is Spending Justified?

Now, of course, pending the time that private capital and private enterprise will take up the burden, the money Government thus spends to encourage the Nation to live better—especially that part of the Nation which most needs it—is taxpayers' money.

Two questions, therefore, arise: "Is that spending justified from the point of view of the individual taxpayer and how should the money be raised."

So far as the taxpayer's individual interest is concerned, I always look at it this way.

Taxes, local and State and Federal combined, are nowhere near as high in this country as they are in any other great nation that pretends to be up to date. If I were a businessman making and hoping to continue to make good profits, I would remind myself as I paid my income tax, moderate by the standards of other nations, that the most important factor in the kind of an active economic life in which profits can be made is people—able, alert, competent and up-to-date people—to produce and to consume. Money invested to make and keep the people of this Nation that kind of people is therefore a good business investment.

And if I were the same man thinking about inheritance taxes and what I could leave to my children, I would say to myself that to leave them a living in a Nation of strong and able men and women is to leave them a better heritage of security than a few thousand dollars saved on an inheritance tax.

Now, how should taxes be paid?

For a great many years, America as a whole has accepted the principle that taxes ought to be paid by individuals in accordance with their capacity to pay. To put it another way, it has meant a graduated tax on a man's increase in wealth. For instance, a poor man or poor family whose increase in wealth in a given year is below a certain figure pays no direct Federal taxes at all; when the family gains more than $2,500 in a year the family pays a small percentage of these gains.

Tax Base Described.

As the gains get still larger, the percentage of the tax goes up so that when a family's wealth increases to, say $100,000 a year, they have to pay a third of it to the Federal Government. In the case of still richer people, they may have to pay more than half of their large incomes to the State and Federal governments.

Last week the Congress passed a new tax bill. It contained many good features—improvements in tax administration, the elimination of a number of nuisance taxes on articles in common use, the lightening of the tax burden on the small corporation as I recommended to the Congress last fall. I hope that these changes made by this tax bill may be helpful to business and that this belief may, in itself, be a factor in the revival of business enterprise.

But, on the other side of the ledger, I cannot help but regret that two very fundamental principles of Government must once more be called to the attention of the public.

Both of them, stripped of every attempt to confuse, are extraordinarily simple and can be understood by every citizen.

In 1936 many large corporations, especially those owned or controlled by a comparatively small number of very rich stockholders, were in the habit of failing to declare dividends they had earned. Thus their stockholders were in a position to leave the profits their money had made in the controlled corporations—paying the Government on these profits only the normal corporation tax of from 10 to 15 per cent. Thus, these stockholders avoided paying a personal income tax at a rate which in many cases would have involved a tax payment of 50 per cent or even higher because the stockholders were in what is known as the upper brackets of the personal income tax.

The Treasury Department found many instances of closely held corporations which, starting with the comparatively modest capital of several million dollars, had, over a period of years, grown into corporations worth several hundreds of millions of dollars, without ever declaring a dividend to their stockholders. This meant a definite, though, of course, strictly legal, device by which these stockholders greatly increased their wealth year by year without having to pay to the Government more than a normal corporation tax, thus escaping very large sums of personal income tax payments.

Unforseen Result.

In principle our objective was right, but in practice the act, as finally worked out in the Senate, undoubtedly did prevent many small corporations from normal and reasonable business expansion, from building up adequate surpluses, or from paying off old debts.

The tax bill this year sought to get rid of these inequitable features but to retain at the same time the principle of stopping tax avoidance. As finally passed, the bill retains that principle but the penalty for withholding dividends to stockholders is so small—only 2½ per cent at the most—that it is doubtful whether it will wholly eliminate the old tax avoidance practices of the past.

It is true that the bill seeks to strengthen the authority of the Government to act against companies which clearly seek to avoid surtaxes for their stockholders by failing to declare dividends out of their profits; and I hope that this new provision, together with the recent favorable decision of the Supreme Court in interpreting the prior law, will retard the revival of the old evil. It seems to me that it is the definite duty and interest of the public and of the legislative and executive branches of the Government to watch very closely to see what happens during the coming year.

We must alwa[illegible] remembe[illegible] that this old metho[illegible] of greatly increasing private fortunes through the withholding of corporate dividends was open and useful only to those citizens who already had wealth large enough to control these large corporations—people whose personal income was already large enough to put them in the higher surtax brackets.

The position of the Administration is, therefore, this:

We are delighted to remove any existing barriers against every little business in the Nation which is seeking to set itself squarely on its own feet; seeking to pay off its debts and seeking to make a reasonable profit; but the Administration does not want large, closely held corporations making large profits to be used as a vehicle by the small number of their owners in order to avoid legitimate income taxes.

For a number of years it has been recognized that this progressive taxation of wealth realistically should apply not only to salaries and dividends and bond coupons but also to other forms of wealth such as increase in one's capital by selling any form of property at a profit.

This new bill wholly eliminates the progressive tax principle with respect to these capital profits; it takes small capital profits and large capital profits at exactly the same rate.

In other words, if you or I sell stocks, which we have held for a few years, at a profit of, let us say, $5,000, we have to pay a tax of 15 per cent on that profit; whereas, the man who has made a profit of $500,000 on stock he has owned is required, under this new bill, to pay a tax of only 15 per cent, just as you and I would. Nobody, by any stretch of the imagination, can say that this new provision maintains the principle of payment in proportion to ability to pay.

Some people who have favored this abandonment of principle have justified their position on the ground that one has to abandon principles once in a while when there is an emergency and that the abandonment of this particular principle will encourage many rich men to take a risk with their capital and invest it in new enterprises.

But this school of thought finds it difficult to answer the fact that almost all—about 80 per cent of all capital gains reported—are profits made in the stock market—profits made not by developing new companies but by buying stocks of old companies low and selling them high, or by the still possible method of selling stocks short—selling stocks you do not own—and then buying them in at a lower price.

The abandonment of the principle of progressive tax payments in accordance with capacity to pay may encourage a small amount of capital to go into new productive enterprises but, chiefly, it will help those who make large profits in buying and selling existing stocks.

New productive enterprise is not created by the buying of stocks of established companies when they are low and selling them when they are high. I should like to see a revision of our tax laws which would really encourage new enterprise and new investment and the undertaking by private capital of projects like this that the Government has undertaken here at Arthurdale. But there is no assurance that untaxed savings will go into such new investment or new enterprise. They may be hoarded or lost in the inflation or deflation that occurs in the shuffling about of existing investments.

We should adopt tax policies which will encourage men to venture and to build new productive wealth. Unless something is added to the combined wealth of the Nation, one man's capital gain may be nothing more than another man's capital loss.

It will be noted that in this analysis of this abandonment of principle, I have attacked no person. I have merely called the attention of the country to certain clear-cut inescapable facts—and especially to the fact that this tax bill which in many respects is a good one, actually abandons the accepted principle of progressive taxation at a point which is very important in our economic life.

Here again is an example of a provision of law which actually and in plain English gives an infinitely greater tax concession to the man who makes a very great profit than to the man who makes a comparatively small profit. It helps the very few, therefore, at the expense of the many. To carry on Government a total sum has to be raised. If the many who make small capital gains have to pay the same rate as the few who make large capital gains, it means that the tax rate for the little fellow must be higher than if we had stuck to the accepted principle of a graduated tax.

In accordance with recommendations made during several past years, I hop that the Congress will undertake a broader program of improving the Federal tax system as a whole in the light of accepted principles of fairness in American taxation and of the necessary incentives in our economic life.

Unwise Parts Stressed.

You will see the difficulty in which your President has been placed. This tax bill contains features that ought to become law, but it contains several undesirable features, especially the ones I have just been talking about.

If I sign the bill—I have until midnight tonight to sign it—many people will think I approve the abandonment of an important principle of American taxation. If I veto the bill it will prevent many of the desirable features of it from going into effect.

Therefore, for the first time since I have been President, I am going to take the third course which is open to me.

I am going to let the act go into effect at midnight tonight without my approval.

By so doing, I call the definite attention of the American people to those unwise parts of the bill I have talked to you about today—one of them which may restore in the future certain forms of tax avoidance, and of concentrated investment power, which we had begun to end, and the other a definite abandonment of a principle of tax policy long ago accepted as part of our American system. Two things we can well remember:

The first is that our whole tax system, State, local and Federal, can and must be greatly improved in the coming year.

The second is that we in this country are getting more practical results in the way of bettering the social conditions of the Nation out of our taxes than ever before in our history. That is why it is a pretty good idea to talk taxes not only to parents but to the younger generation of America.

I am proud of what I have seen here today and I am proud of all of you who are helping so greatly to make this community an American success.

President Roosevelt visited Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Degolyer and their 11 children on his Arthurdale, W. Va., trip yesterday. Said the President: "And is this your next to last?" Said Degolyer, holding the child, "This, Mr. President," and emphatically, "is the LAST."

O'Connell Talk In Jersey City Again Stopped

Hague

newspaper reporters reached him at Newark.

"The minute they recognized who I was," he said, "Chief Walsh, one or two uniformed officers and four or five plainclothesmen jumped on me, threw their arms around me and pushed me. As I got in the car, one of the officers shoved me as hard as he could into the back seat."

He said he was "badgered" at the police station and asserted the "thing that impressed me most about their whole psychology and philosophy was their terrible anti-Semitism." He added:

"Chief Walsh said all of those who supported me were just Jews and that Jews caused the whole trouble there and they were going to put an end to their agitation."

He said he did not believe he was in any danger from the crowd at the field, stating "the far greater number shouted 'let him speak' and were sympathetic to us."

Plans to Go Back.

O'Connell said he "was not discouraged" and would return to Jersey City "at the first opportunity." It would be several months from now, he said, because of his campaign for reelection in Montana.

Public Safety Director Casey in a statement denied O'Connell's charge that he was "jumped upon" or "handled very brutally" by Jersey City policemen.

"That is not true," said Casey. "In fact, O'Connell thanked me for the service performed by Jersey City police who probably saved his life by rescuing him from the enraged crowd.

"He was as white as a sheet and trembling like a leaf when I met him. He told me 'I want to thank you for saving my life.' He told me he had come to Jersey City believing his sponsors had a lot of friends here, but when he reached Pershing Field he was convinced he was entirely alone against the mass of people. . . .

"I told him he was entirely free to go if he wished to make his speech, but I advised him against doing so because of the temper of the crowd. He said, 'No business. If ever I loved seeing a policeman it was when they saved me from that crowd.'

"O'Connell's reported charge that any of our officials criticized or condemned the Jewish people is a complete and deliberate misstatement. He knows that his whole statement is false and that instead of putting on a brave and heroic performance he was in fact thorough scared and only too anxious to get back to Newark or any other place."

The Montana Democrat had planned to defy the city ordinance prohibiting public speeches and meetings without permits. He appeared at police-guarded Pershing Field shortly after 7 p. m. (E.S.T.). A crowd estimated by police at between 10,000 and 15,000 was there and some quickly recognized him.

Some yelled to him to make his speech. Others shouted "Kill him!" "Throw him out!" The crowd surged toward him and fists flew. Police rushed in, grabbed O'Connell and sped him to a waiting car. It was all over in a few moments.

Asked later if anyone had hit him, O'Connell said "Nope, not a soul."

Officers Hit in Face.

Capt. William V. McLaughlin, commanding officer of the precinct where O'Connell was taken, said the Congressman "was very pleasant and did not show a bit of irascibility. I told him he was violating the law by coming here and he smiled."

Police Chief Harry Walsh and Capt. John Sinnott, who were among the officers who surrounded O'Connell when a crowd rushed him at the field, said they were struck in the face.

O'Connell's movements had been kept secret up to the time of his arrival. It was learned tonight he had motored from Washington this morning, that he had dinner tonight witht Carl Holderman, chairman of the New Jersey Labor's Non-Partisan League, in Passaic, and drove to Jersey City, parking about four blocks from the stadium.

Spokesmen for the Hudson Labor Defense Committee said this was done in an attempt to defeat what they said was a rival plan to prevent his entering the city. If O'Connell was unable to reach the meeting place, one spokesmen said, he was prepared to speak through a loudspeaker from an autogyro flying over the field.

It was O'Connell's second failure in his campaign to speak out against Hague in New Jersey's second largest city. On May 7, thousands of Hague supporters massed in Journal Square and caused the sponsors of that proposed speech to cancel the meeting "for fear of bloodshed."

O'Connell was accompanied on the automobile drive by his wife, Al Harrison, an organizer for the textile workers organizing committee, and Edward Kinsler, jr., chairman of the meeting which was called by the Hudson County Committee for Labor Defense and Civil Rights.

Mrs. O'Connell, who accompanied the Representative on his last visit, said her husband tried to prevail upon her to remain in Passaic.

"I'd be worried to death if I stayed here," she said. "I'm going with you."

By the United Press.

Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, one of the House liberal bloc, said last night if Jersey City, N. J., police can expell Representative Jerry J. O'Connell, "they can 'deport' President Roosevelt as well."

Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, who refrained with O'Connell from addressing a Jersey City meeting, May 7, said the "deportation" is "just another example of the flagrant violations of civil liberties under the regime of Mayor Frank Hague."

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, who was "deported" from Jersey City when he attempted to make a speech there, wished Representative O'Connell "luck" although he did did not see him before O'Connell left for Jersey City.

Four Germans Held.

New York, May 27 (U.P.).—Four members of the crew of the German liner Bremen were held as material witnesses tonight by Federal authorities in connection with investigation of an international espionage ring.

Wilhelm Boehaye, said to be a "political officer" aboard the Bremen, and Johann Kleiber, second radio officer, were held in bail of $15,000 each and Seaman Johann Hart and Walter Otto were held in bail of $5,000 each.

The men were arrested in connection with the "disappearance" two weeks ago of Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, who had been summoned as a witness in the spy ring inquiry. He sailed aboard the Bremen without passport and upon arrival in Germany was arrested for having none. He was fined and imprisoned for a few days and it has been reported he will not return to America.

The Federal grand jury yesterday called several witnesses, including Capt. Adolf Ahrens, of the Bremen, and William Drechsel, general marine superintendent of the North German Lloyd Line, in the investigation of Griebl's departure.

The four men arrested will not be permitted to sail when the Bremen makes her scheduled departure shortly after midnight tonight.

Veterans of Argonne To Meet in Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., May 27 (AP).—Maj. Walker Adams, who commanded Company L, 317th Infantry, A. E. F., during three different engagements in the Argonne Forest, will be guest of honor at a reunion of the company here tomorrow.

Veterans from Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Washington, Roanoke, Richmond and Norfolk will be among those gathered to swap yarns of 20 years ago, when the company saw fighting in the Argonne, at St. Mihiel and in the Somme campaign.

Newton, Iowa, May 27 (AP).—Nine persons suffered shock when a platform gave way plunging them into a cistern filled with about five feet of water.

50 Japanese Newsmen Killed in Chinese War

Tokyo, May 27 (AP).—More than 50 Japanese reporters and cameramen have been killed or wounded covering the war in China. Some newspapers have nearly 100 men following the troops, organized in military style for their work as "captains, corporals and privates."

Bolivia Will Retain Temporary President

La Paz, Bolivia, May 27 (AP).—Bolivia's constituent assembly today named Lieut. Col. German Busch constitutional president of Bolivia. He had been provisional president of a military junta which assumed control when President David Toro resigned last July 13.

to dispatch several warships to Port Vendres, on the Mediterranean, 7 miles above Cerbere, and instructed the general commanding the Sixteenth military district to proceed at once to Cerbere and investigate the bombing.

The Cerbere police prefect said that, although the raiding planes could not be identified definitely, they undoubtedly were insurgent because Spanish loyalist anti-aircraft batteries across the border opened fire on them.

Loyalists Lose 10,000.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 27 (U.P.).—The loyalists' big offensive along Catalonia's western border was reduced today to hand-to-hand warfare in the Tremp swamps after costing 45,000 casualties in one of the bloodiest chapters of the civil war.

French military observers, describing the seven days of fighting along a 55-mile front, estimated Gen. Vicente Rojo's loyalist armies had lost 10,000 men—more than 1,000 dead for every square mile recaptured in the offensive.

More than 15,000 loyalists were reported wounded.

Gen. Franco's thin lines were reported to have held against Rojo's mass assaults all along the front except at the Tremp bridgehead, where powerful forces of the government's international brigades pushed the insurgents back as far as Figuerola de Orcau.

The loyalists, striving to recapture five large hydro-electric plants on the artificial lakes above and below Tremp, still were 7 miles from their objective at Figuerola.

The government denied its drive against Tremp had been halted and reported that troops striking from Mount San Cornelio had seized two strategic heights south of San Cornelio.

Extortion Plotter Gets 10 Years in Levine Case

Trenton, N. J., May 27 (AP).—Stanley Thomas Jasosky, 20, of Newark, who pleaded guilty to Federal indictments charging him with mailing extortion letters to the father of the missing 12-year-old Peter Levine, of New Rochelle, N. Y., was sentenced today to ten years in prison. Investigation showed Jasosky had no connection with the boy's disappearance.

White Slaver Convicted.

New York, May 27 (AP).—Susie Martin, owner of a resort in Washington, was convicted today for the second time in two weeks of violating the Mann act by transporting women between Washington and New York. She is scheduled to be sentenced Tuesday with Paul Bascomb, colored saxophone player, in another case. A jury convicted them last week of transporting a 16-year-old white girl between Washington and New York.

King to Propose Senate Study of Politics in WPA

Spend

it would constitute a heavy and unnecessary drain on the Treasury. Experience has shown, he said, that "pump priming will not bring prosperity."

Another amendment offered by Byrd would limit to 5 per cent all administrative costs under the spending-lending program.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, attacked the $3,247,000,000 lending-spending bill with a denunciation of the "rotten form of bribery that buys the franchise of a voter for bread."

State Contributions Urged.

"There is not a bill which has been passed since the New Deal began that has in it the undermining, destroying power of this huge appropriation," he declared.

The Vermonter declared he was for adequate relief to the needy, but that existing methods of distributing relief money made the recipients "coat-tail riders of the man who controls it."

Austin urged support of a substitute bill by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, which would provide $2,410,000,000 of relief funds to be used as grants-in-aid to States. States would put up 25 per cent of expenditures under this proposal.

Political Attack Renewed.

Foes of the Administration bill said charges of politics in the Works Progress Administration had increased their chances of obtaining restrictions on political activities of work relief employes.

For two days the Senate had heard denunciations of WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins for indorsing Representative Otha Wearin, opponent of Senator Guy Gillette in the Iowa Democratic Senatorial primary.

Borah Backs Gillette.

"I am classed as a Republican and I do not live in Iowa," Borah said, "but under the practice which has now been established I would be willing to walk to Iowa and cast a vote for Gillette. He is a great Senator."

Republicans and conservative Democrats promptly gave their support to a proposal by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, which would prevent WPA employes from participating in party caucuses of conventions at which a President, Vice President or members of Congress are nominated.

The National Grange issued a public statement, meanwhile, that "it would seem the part of wisdom for the Senate to reduce the appropriations for pump-priming purposes to more reasonable proportions."

Holt Urges Merit System.

"What right have we to fasten the shackles of a crushing debt upon unborn generations?" the farm organization asked. "If we of today cannot pay our own way, how can we expect our children and our grandchildren to meet their obligations and pay our debts in the bargain?"

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, submitted an amendment to require that all persons holding salaried positions created by the relief bill should go under civil service by June 30, 1939.

Holt said he offered the amendment in the hope it would help to take employes of the WPA and PWA out of politics.

Session Today Ordered.

Foes of the lending-spending measure, which already has been approved by the House, predicted it would not be voted upon in the Senate before the end of next week. But Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, floor manager of the bill, said he hoped for passage by next Wednesday.

Seeking to hasten action, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic leader, called off the Senate's usual week-end recess and ordered a Saturday session.

Barkley also contemplated a meeting for Monday, Memorial Day, but some Senators said they were trying to work out an agreement under which the Senate could recess Monday. This agreement would provide for a limitation of debate, beginning Tuesday.

Chinese Drive Foes Back on Lunghai Line

Japan

about 20 Chinese divisions, comprising 100,000 well-equipped soldiers, with flame-splitting tanks as a spearhead, were making a determined stand at Lanfeng. Their action was said to be comparable in scope with the defense of Suchow, which fell a week ago after a fierce month-long battle.—Editor's note.)

A description of what has happened, based on the correspondent's observations and statements by staff officers of Gen. Shang Chen, Chinese commander here, follows:

Cantonese cavalry regiments, which fought their way through the Japanese after the Chinese retreat from Suchow last week, were reformed and led a surprise attack on both flanks of the Japanese forces to the east of Kaifeng.

By dawn the Japanese were piled up in two sectors in a narrow strip of territory between the Lunghai railway and the Yellow River. They were driven out of the town of Chun-Hsin-Chi and then out of Chen-Li-Kuo, 7 miles northwest of Lanfeng—a Chinese position which Doihara's units were attacking.

Part of the Japanese escaped into the walled town of San-Yi, where they still were holding out at the hour this dispatch was filed—11 a. m.

While this action was under way other Chinese columns fought their way out of the big town of Kweiteh, to the eastward, and encircled other Japanese units attacking Lanfeng. They were joined by a third Chinese force under Gen. Kwei Yung-ching, which came up from the south, and drove the Japanese from the railway with artillery fire.

By mid-afternoon yesterday most of the Japanese columns in the Lanfeng area were in full retreat northward toward Kaocheng.

General Shang said a number of Japanese field pieces and some machine guns were captured. He described his own casualties as very heavy since his men had to take many Japanese machine gun nests in bayonet charges.

Shang estimated Doihara's strength at about 75,000 men, including 30,000 former Chinese soldiers under Gen. Liu Kwei-tang, who long has been a Japanese partisan.

This Chinese victory, which admittedly is merely local and not likely to play a decisive part in the general Lunghai campaign, is entirely different from that at Taierhchwang, where the Chinese simply held defensive positions until the Japanese were exhausted from repeated attacks and then cut them off with guerrilla bands which operated from the Japanese rear.

The difference lies in the fact that this counterattack, in which the Chinese used about 150,000 men, was conceived deliberately and carried out as an entirely offensive action against comparatively fresh Japanese forces operating en masse.

The correspondent's observations do not bear out Chinese claims that Doihara's forces have been "wiped out," but they do show that the little Japanese general, who as much as any other man is responsible for this undeclared war, has suffered a defeat he never can live down.

4 Years Old Today, Dionne Quintuplets May Be Secluded

sician, has announced their movie careers will be ended, for several years at least, when they have finished a feature film on which they are soon to start.

The decision of their guardians May 19 to reunite the five famous daughters of Oliva and Elzire Dionne with their parents and seven brothers and sisters increased the probability that this may be the last summer tourists will be permitted to watch the children at play.

Their father is to be given more authority in their affairs and this, also, may tend to withdraw them from their money-making and attention.

More than 400,000 tourists are expected to see the children in the Dafoe nursery before next fall, and their seclusion probably would have a damaging effect on the tourist trade they have drawn to northern Ontario.

Within the next few months a home will be built near the girls' nursery to house the entire Dionne family for the first time since September 22, 1934, when the quintuplets left their farmhouse birthplace.

Mullen Granted Appeal From Police Court Order

The Court of Appeals yesterday granted Attorney John P. Mullen an appeal from the Police Court order suspending him from practice in that court for six months.

William E. Leahy, Mullen's counsel, challenged the Police Court's authority to suspend an attorney and contended that no evidence was adduced to probe the bar committee's charges of improper conduct.

From the time they were removed from the shipping crate and caged yesterday afternoon until the monkey house was closed they didn't stop tumbling, climbing, scrapping and playing practical jokes on one another.

Peewee, the baby, is about a year old. He thinks he can do every acrobatic stunt his parents can and takes many bumps as a result.

Also included in yesterday's shipment from New York were three piping crows from Australia. The entire lot, property of an animal dealer, will remain here on deposit indefinitely. Chances are that Dr. Mann, if his budget can stand the strain, will buy some of the specimens.

95 Equestriennes To Compete Today

Fredericksburg, Va., May 27.—The annual horse show sponsored by the riding club of Mary Washington College will be held tomorrow in the instruction ring in Battlefield National Memorial Park.

Ninety-five students will participate in the 21 events, which will consist of jumping, several novelty races, good seat and hands class, costume class (a Southern plantation scene), achievement class, consolation class and others.

The winning jumper will receive a hunting trophy donated by Simon Ulman. Mrs. Joseph Ulman is donating a loving cup for the rider who has achieved most progress during the year. The M. W. C. Pitts Trophy class will be a climax to the afternoon, when all blue ribbon winners will compete to decide the outstanding rider.

Guernsey Exhibit Will Open Today

Frederick, Md., May 27 (AP).—Guernsey cattle owners from four counties will meet near here tomorrow for the annual field day and exhibit of cattle sponsored by the Guernsey Breeders Association.

About 1,000 owners and breeders are expected from Frederick, Carroll, Washington and Montgomery counties. The exhibit will be at the Willowdale Farm of Granville Hiberd, near New Windsor.

250,000 Men Join In Eucharistic Rite At Budapest Altar

Budapest, May 27 (AP).—A quarter of a million men of all classes occupied 44 miles of benches in vast heroes square tonight for the day's greatest event of the Thirty-fourth Eucharistic Congress—the night adoration of the most blessed sacrament for men.

Thousands of farmers were among the throng. The great crowd sat before an altar which was 150 feet high. All visiting foreign church dignitaries were present, along with 500 priests, who circulated among the throng to administer the eucharistic wafer.

Night adoration of the most blessed sacrament for women also was held in various churches.

He Pushed The Frontier Back.

Dr. John Jacob Abel, who died in Baltimore on Thursday, was one of the little group of outstanding scientists whose researches have made the Johns Hopkins Medical School world famous. And this is not the less true because to the average layman the name of this modest, tireless, brilliant worker in the field of pharmacology has been unknown. Thousands who never heard of John J. Abel have reason to bless his memory. For the treatment of diabetes, diphtheria, rickets, syphilis, tetanus and many other diseases has been profoundly modified and improved by his work.

It is men like Dr. Abel, combining professional knowledge, great technical skill and a passion for impersonal achievement, who carry forward the torch of civilization. Their names are seldom in the headlines. The character of their activities is beyond the comprehension of most of us. But from the quality of their thought evolves the substance of human progress.

Medals, awards and scientific honors were bestowed on Dr. Abel by a score of countries. Just over a week ago, on his eighty-first birthday, membership in the Royal Society of London was added to the long list. But these formal recognitions meant little to this unassuming savant. It was the work which counted with him.

Dr. Abel was past middle age when his researches made possible the production of adrenalin. He was 70 when he pointed the way to the manufacture of insulin. Almost to the day of his death he was experimenting in his laboratory, penetrating the secrets of nature and showing how they can be controlled and utilized for the welfare of the human race. Much of his most notable work was accomplished after retirement from formal duties at the Hopkins.

In the recognition of such men, and in the provision of facilities to aid their work, is found an accurate measure of the degree of civilization a nation has attained. Cleveland will doubtless wish to commemorate the birthplace of this great American scientist. But Dr. Abel's most lasting monument will be in that advancement of medicine for which he was responsible. He was a pioneer, and fortunate in being so in a country which still recognizes the virtues of pioneering.

A Good Appointment.

President Roosevelt's reappointment of Richmond B. Keech as a member of the Public Utilities Commission is equivalent to an expression of confidence in that District agency. The critical attitude of some groups toward the PUC is apparently not shared at the White House. It must be assumed, in other words, that this appointment reflects official satisfaction over the regulation of utilities in the District.

Both as people's counsel and Public Utilities Commissioner, Mr. Keech has rendered valuable service to the community. In addition to being fair and unbiased in judgment, he is especially well trained for the position he holds. His appointment serves as an excellent precedent for the filling of other important local posts now vacant. It is even more important for the President to name as Commissioner a man thoroughly familiar with the District government and its problems.

One other post intended to safeguard the public interest in the fixing of utility rates remains vacant. Indeed, the District has been without a people's counsel for a year and a half since no appropriations were made for that office following the resignation of William A. Roberts. Fortunately funds for revival of the job were included in the 1938 District supply bill. It is not too soon for the President and his advisers on local affairs to begin looking for a high-grade, energetic lawyer to fill this assignment.

Beyond Censorship.

It is now nearly 11 months since Japan began her undeclared war on China. Yet victory for the island empire is less of a certainty than it seemed to be last summer.

This is the key fact behind the cabinet shake-up in Japan. For had developments on the mainland followed original Japanese calculations, the war would have been over long ago. Obviously something went awry and it is not unnatural that the army leaders, instead of blaming themselves, tend to blame the civil government, even though the latter has acted as the pliant tool of the military. More openly than ever it is the army which is now taking the direction of Japanese policy into its own hands.

That explains the replacement of Gen. Sugiyama by Gen. Itagaki as minister of war, of Hoki Hirota by Gen. Ugaki as foreign minister and the addition to the cabinet of the firebrand, Gen. Sadao Araki, prime mover in the Manchurian coup of 1931, as minister of education.

The presumption is that Japan will, under her new leadership, make a more ambitious effort than ever to achieve decisive victory in China. This probably means the sending of large-scale reinforcements to the fighting fronts in the hope that Chinese resistance can thus be overwhelmed.

But the change in the Japanese cabinet has another and no less important significance. To the Japanese people it constitutes a warning that they are far from the end of the sacrifices they are being called upon to bear. The duration of the war which should have ended many months ago is a fact that no amount of censorship can conceal. Nor can propaganda disguise the significance of governmental changes for which the absence of effective victory is the only reason.

Without Approval.

The President defends his decision to permit the tax bill to become law without his signature very adroitly. It contains certain desirable features, he says, which should be enacted. On the other hand, he objects strongly to the virtual elimination of taxes on undistributed corporate profits and the substitution of a flat-rate tax on capital gains for the existing graduated schedules. Consequently, he has decided to accept the so-called bad along with the good, while indicating that he has not abandoned the fight for retention of the tax principles in which he believes.

From the business viewpoint the President's reiterated denial that the controversial taxes in question have played a large part in discouraging capital accumulation and new investment will be disheartening. His almost obsessive interest in extracting maximum tax returns from individuals with large incomes causes him to discount the significance of what actually happens when punitive taxes are levied upon the reinvestment of earnings and excessively high levies imposed upon realized gains.

As the Senate Committee on Finance stated, in urging modification of the capital gains tax: "There is an essential difference between income derived from salaries, wages, interest and rents and income derived from capital gains. It is always to the advantage of the taxpayer to receive the first class of income, no matter what the rate of tax, as long as it is less than 100 per cent. On the other hand, the tax in respect of capital gains is optional—the taxpayer is not obliged to pay any tax unless he realizes a gain by the sale of the asset."

For that reason, as the committee explained, an excessive tax on capital gains "freezes transactions and prevents the free flow of capital into productive investments." That being the case, the President's contention that stock market speculators will be the chief beneficiaries of a reduction in the capital gains tax is an indefensible assumption.

However, it serves no purpose to reiterate the telling arguments that convinced a reluctant Congress that business recovery had been retarded by the controversial impositions to which the President clings as a matter of principle. After all, actions speak louder than words. And the President by his actions has at least given business some immediate relief from these oppressive impositions. Furthermore he has admitted that the undistributed profits tax in its present form has imposed great hardships upon small corporations.

It is also encouraging that the address contains no recommendation for piecemeal modification of our tax system in the near future for the purpose simply of restoring the taxes desired by the President. On the contrary, it is suggested that our whole tax system, Federal, State and local, needs a complete overhauling. With that statement all thoughtful men will doubtless agree. By the time we are ready to consider comprehensive reforms of this sort it is to be hoped that the value of the moderate relief so grudgingly granted at this time will have had opportunity to justify itself.

A Case In Point.

District experience in determining minimum wage rates for women workers in specific industries has furnished abundant evidence of the necessity of flexibility in the schedules. It has been shown that each industry and each group of workers presents special problems calling for individual treatment. To adapt rates of pay to the capacity of the industry to meet the wages bill is essential in the interest of the workers as well as that of their employers. Apart from that, the actual amounts needed by different groups of workers to cover decent living costs varies widely within the District.

A particularly striking illustration of the complications arising from attempts to apply uniform standards even within the limits of a single local industry is afforded by the case of the beauty parlor operators. The colored employers have sought to submit much lower living cost budgets for the consideration of the minimum wage conference.

While their petition has been refused, the fact that it was made is of great significance. It means that the living costs applicable to the white workers are believed by the colored employers to be unnecessarily high. The latter evidently fear closure of shops and loss of employment if compelled to conform to the standards set for the white group.

One may deplore differences in economic status and earning ability that make uniform standards hazardous for less favored groups. But the situation exists and to disregard it is to encourage serious economic dislocations. It has already been noted in these columns that the minimum wages set for certain workers in the District would, within three years, be overtopped by the rigid minimum payments carried by the House wages and hours bill. Yet even the modest rates set locally are reported to have led to a considerable number of dismissals.

The House has blindly refused to heed the plain lesson conveyed by District experience in passing a bill making no allowance for differentials. The Senate opponents of rigid regulation might find valuable support for their position by drawing upon local experience. The case of the beauty parlor operators indicates that not merely sectional differences, but differences based upon social status, race, and all sorts of factors have to be considered. In short, regulation of wages in the interest of the workers requires administrative discretion in varying rates to meet widely different conditions.

A Job For A Single Agency.

In an address before the International Association of Public Employment Services, Frank Bane, executive director of the Social Security Board, has emphasized the interlocking character of public employment service and unemployment compensation. The former is designed to help workers find jobs; the latter, to tide them over periods between jobs. But, as Mr. Bane says, the objective of the system as a whole is the same—to "assure wage-earners a reasonable chance of security." Obviously, this method of dealing with the unemployment problem—constructive as it is—was never intended to be a substitute for a system designed to relieve distress caused by prolonged unemployment or destitution due to unemployability.

So rapid has been the development of our public employment services since passage of the Wagner-Peyser act in 1933 that many people are not yet aware of the system's importance and comprehensiveness. This law authorizes the Federal Government to co-operate with the States in establishing and maintaining public employment exchanges. Since its passage the social security act has placed new, responsible tasks upon the employment exchanges because of a proviso that unemployment insurance benefits shall be made solely through them or other agencies approved by the Social Security Board.

Mr. Bane points out that every State in the Union, as well as the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Alaska are now co-operating with the Federal Government in both public employment service and unemployment compensation. In 49 out of a total of 51 jurisdictions, both services are under the direction of the same overhead State agency. However, the rapid growth of a system not yet in full operation has naturally given rise to serious administrative difficulties. And inexperience has added unnecessarily to the administrative cost of the services. The unemployment insurance system, furthermore, is being inaugurated under most inauspicious conditions, in the midst of depression.

The registration of applicants for unemployment benefits and the necessity of keeping in touch with beneficiaries have added to the growing pressure upon the employment exchanges. New offices have had to be opened and old ones expanded. Additions have been made to the staff and of course more money has been required to cover administrative costs. With these developments in mind, Mr. Bane pleads for closer co-ordination between the employment services and the unemployment insurance systems of the several States in the interest of efficiency and economy.

Despite his official connection with the Social Security Board he also has the courage to express his conviction that here in Washington a single Federal agency should take over the duties now assigned to the United States Employment Service, under the Department of Labor, and to the unemployment compensation bureau of the Social Security Board.

For obvious reasons Mr. Bane does not express an opinion as to whether the unified agency should be placed under the Department of Labor or the Social Security Board. Objectively viewed, the Department of Labor is clearly the logical choice. But the largely autonomous character of the subordinate agencies concerned makes their position in the departmental scheme a matter of no great importance.

The main consideration is to eliminate friction and duplication in local administration and to provide for unified control at the center. As a student of social problems and as an administrator with wide practical experience, Mr. Bane is especially well qualified to suggest how these objectives can best be attained.

Wages And Hours.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The wage and hour bill now before Congress is the burning question before the workers of the country today. Its enemies have a poor conception of the needs of the workers.

The bill calls for a minimum wage of 25 cents per hour and a 44-hour week the first year, which would be a weekly wage of $11. The second year calls for 32½ cents per hour for a 42-hour week, which would be $13.65. Third year calls for 40 cents per hour and a 40-hour week, which would be $16.

Can it be possible that our solons really think the above wage scale is enough to support a family on? And our Southern Representatives think that the above figures are still too high for their section of the country.

I hope our solons will never be condemned to live on such wages.

GEORGE GRIMM, Sr.
Baltimore, May 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whatever may be the intent of the backers of the wage and hour bill, it will have a bad effect on business, prolong the depression and cause disorder in its enforcement, for the following reasons:

1. On account of the difference of climate which makes it necessary to wear overcoats, furs and woolens in the North and have warm homes with frost-proof cellars, and fires more than six months of the year, while the people of the South need comparatively little clothing, of light cotton, live in cheap houses without cellars, use fire only for cooking, which makes the cost of living three times as great in the North as in the South.

2. If there will be a minimum wage fixed by law, it will become the maximum-wage law of the country.

3. The farmer must work seven days a week. The result would be to make comparative slaves of the farmers.

The only sound doctrine is for the employes and the employers to handle the wage and hour question, and they only can do it, as they know the necessary elements.

Netherlands Seapower.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Jonkheer H. M. van Haersma de With represents The Netherlands at Mr. Roosevelt's court. I note his picture and a sketch of his career in The Sunday Post, of May 22. This reminds me:

Said Emperor William, in the days of his glory, to the Dutch Minister at a review, "What do you think of them, Mynheer?" He was referring to the imperial guard which was just strutting past.

"Splendid men, splendid. And every one 6 feet and more. But, Your Majesty, we can flood our country 10 feet deep."

The Dutch, in their wars with the Spaniards and the French, did this several times. Successfully so. "Sea power" has it all over land power. This is why Old Man Noah survived.

Virginian's Prediction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While other conservative Democrats of the South are making friendly gestures toward the New Deal for mere political expediency, they always have the definite assurance that Senator Byrd will hold for them the fort of reaction.

The Senator will assail pump-priming as a direct threat to national solvency. He bewails the fact that spreading money is not a sound and permanent cure for the depression, yet he fights the wage-and-hour bill designed to supplement the spreading program by importing to it a more permanent and substantial motive than the previous pump-priming program.

Anyone can be a political martyr in Washington, D. C., so long as he has a poll tax back at home rendering him immune from the wrath of one-third of the eligible voters of the State. But in spite of the diabolical poll tax, I predict dismal defeat for Senator Byrd in 1940. I pledge my vote against him now. I believe in priming empty bellies.

Helpful Hints.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One way in which Postmaster General Farley might help considerably with the unemployment problem would be to add enough employes to the Postoffice Department to get the mails delivered promptly.

The above helpful hint might well be applied likewise to the police force, to school teachers, to hospital nurses, to park attendants, to street cleaners, to garbage collectors, to smoke inspectors—to mention but a few—all of which classifications are undermanned and overworked, while other men are clamoring for jobs.

If all of these forces all across the country were brought up to par probably millions of men and women would be put to useful and permanent, not merely periodic and forced work.

Is there a chance that this sound idea may be acted upon? Very little. It will probably not even get to first base. Why not? Because, while increasing the already established useful public services would assure a living to millions of men and women, it would not assure profitable, pork-barrel "projects" for financially powerful, politically favored corporations, notably in the cement and building trades lines.

Far East Trade.

To the Eitor of The Post—Sir: Recently, on the financial page of some newspapers, a statement appeared, supposedly made by one of the directors of the "Made in America Club, Inc." regarding our trade with Japan in 1937 being more costly than with China.

This assertion is erroneous and can easily be proven by referring to Department of Commerce figures for that year, as follows: The net between exports and imports with Japan was in our favor by $90,000,000, whereas, with China, we paid out $50,000,000 more than we received.

Those who keep in constant touch with our foreign relations over a period of years know that to buy more than we sell to other countries causes an adverse dollar balance. I approve trading with other countries. However, to state that it is profitable in the long run to buy more than one sells, is preposterous.

Lip Service Not Enough.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I admired the fine sentiments expressed in your editorial, "Lip Service Is Not Enough." However, I feel it necessary to repeat those very words to you: Lip service is not enough!

Today the most successful diplomacy—Fascist diplomacy—is based on threats of violence. And the diplomatic weight of great nations has been powerless before it. Obviously, we must go further. But how?

There are many ways, many invaluable organizations in this country serving the purposes of true collective security. They are all based on one principle, the economic power wielded by the American people. It has recently been estimated that we have almost half of the world's wealth and productive resources. This wealth is flexible and infinitely powerful.

We need no longer be entirely dependent on the mysterious and futile workings of our State Department, for through our buying and selling we can throw great weight on the side of world peace.

It's up to us.

Business Uncertainty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Matthew Woll, vice president American Federation of Labor, recently said: "The seemingly never ending campaign of propaganda of Government officials, big and little, as well as by all sorts of Government bureaus and agencies designed to discredit all business and industry can only result in injuring labor as well as industry . . . This harmful and destructive propaganda should, therefore, cease. American industry is now in a state of convalescence. It needs no severe nostrums. It needs the encouragement of common sense."

When will the Roosevelt Administration take cognizance of the aforesaid facts which are evident to anyone capable of reasoning? Can the New Deal continue to ignore the opinions of practically all of our great industrial leaders who are unanimous in the belief that prevailing business uncertainty is primarily due to the Roosevelt "big stick" and what seems a stubborn desire of the Administration to reach visionary objectives.

Money, as we all know, is a most timid commodity and will remain in hiding as long as we are plagued with mounting deficits, increased taxation, incredible waste, not to mention the pernicious modern un-American theory that the politicians are elected to rule the people instead of serving them.

For Race Improvement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many countries are enacting eugenics legislation for race improvement. In Denmark a sterilization law was passed as long ago as 1929. This was done, the Danes said, because of "the great danger which a great number of mentally defective persons presents to the people."

Denmark evidently approves this 1929 law. It was followed by another law in 1935. Under this, sterilization of even physically normal persons is admissible if "danger of a transmissible hereditary tendency makes it good for these people not to have any descendants."

In most of these older countries, population pressure has reached the saturation point, or limit of food supply. Therefore they end the possibility of weakling births by sterilization. Meantime, they accelerate the birthrate of high powers.

Ought not every American be alert as to how other nations are outdistancing us as to births of the leadership type?

Unhappy Dilemma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just been disqualified for a Civil Service typist job in the Government because my eyesight without my glasses is poor. Although a reputable eye specialist in this city has corrected the defect with glasses, I cannot get a Civil Service job.

The commission tells me it is because the Retirement Board would not want to take the chance of employing a person whose eyesight is already bad. But there is no more chance of my causing them trouble than the average person employed. My doctor said that under normal conditions, I will be able to use my eyes as well and as long as most people.

Even if I were sick, or if it were impossible to correct the defect with glasses, it would be a problem—but to be physically able to work and to be refused on those grounds—it is a discouraging situation. Especially, since for the last two years I have been working for the Government on temporary jobs and have been doing good work. In that time I have taken very little sick leave, less than the average Government worker.

I am 25 and will probably have to work for 40 more years. It is difficult to get into private business; I have tried. The Government refuses to give me a job. Does it seem sarcastic to ask the question: Shall I go on relief?

The Post Impressionist

Noah Webster.

SINCE words were his province, it is fitting that a few should be devoted to Noah Webster on the anniversary of his death, May 28, 1843. These should be as American as possible, for to him, more than anyone else, our language owes its growth. We should read and write English had there been no Webster, but it would be of a different variety, a diction more attenuated and formal than that now used.

Webster was not the first to recognize the existence of an American language. But, while others lamented its spread as a corruption of the pure English, he encouraged its growth as a means of winning cultural independence from England. And, that his detractors may be given their due, to sell a few millions more of his books.

Probably his most important book was the "blue-backed speller," which, before its final obsolescence, ran to nearly a hundred million copies. It followed the pioneers westward, every frontier printer turning out an edition. The South, during the Civil War, had its own special printings, expurgated of Yankeeisms.

Before this war, Jefferson Davis said of the book, "We have a unity of language no other people possesses, and we owe this unity, above all else, to Noah Webster's Yankee Spelling Book."

Much of this success was due to Webster's shrewd salesmanship. He wrote letters praising his work, and not always in his own name. He solicited and printed testimonials, approaching, though without success, both Washington and Franklin for this purpose. He incited and carried on controversies so that his book would be discussed. And, in his contracts, he insisted that his speller always be bound in a "blue-back," thus insuring its easy identification.

His book was important because it provided for a systematic method of pronouncing its words. Thus children throughout the country were taught to speak alike and the American language did not break up into a dozen dialects as it might have.

However, it is for his dictionaries that Webster is most famous, and justly so. He did not write the first dictionary, nor, for that matter, did Johnson. But these were the primary lexicographers of their countries, both dealing with the same language, but in ways as different as the two peoples.

Johnson is famous for his polysyllables, his ability to make simple words incomprehensible, and his tendency to use his definitions as bludgeons. His political adversaries were "traitors," "pensioners" were slaves of the state, and a "pension" was pay given a state hireling to betray his country. He defined "excise" as "a hateful tax levied upon commodities, and adjudged not by the common judges of property, but wretches hired by those to whom Excise is paid."

No wonder the tax commissioners considered a suit against Johnson, who, incidentally, treated himself nearly as bad in defining "lexicographer" as "a writer of dictionaries, a harmless drudge."

Though Webster gave voice to his political and social convictions in his dictionary, he was more subtle than the ursine Johnson. His own political party he defined thus, "Federalist, n.—A friend to the Constitution of the U. States." His opponents caught the implication without trouble.

But Webster's Dictionary of the American Language was famous for other reasons. It defined more words than any other dictionary at that time, 70,000 in all. Among these were included such common words as "caucus," "whittle," and "spell—a short time," while many of the linguistic monstrosities of Johnson were omitted.

In his examples, Webster gave tongue to his homely philosophy in the best "Poor Richard" manner. A few examples will suffice to show this:

"Hope, n.—A well-founded scriptural hope is, in our religion, the source of ineffable happiness."

"Press, n.—A free press is a great blessing to a free people; a licentious press is a curse to society."

"Taste, v. t.—Apples boiled in a brass kettle sometimes taste of brass."

Besides thus defining common words, Webster tried also to simplify spelling. He lopped the final "k" from "musick," "publick" and kindred words, though Johnson had insisted upon the longer spelling and had omitted the "k" from "Imlac," the sage in Rasselas, to make the name seem foreign.

Webster also dropped the "u" from "favour" and "honour," and changed Greek derivatives beginning in "sk" into "sc," excepting "skeptic." And so it is today, the latest Unabridged carries on his work without skepticism, though the rest of the world is a little sceptical.

Anti-Lottery Opposition.

NEW YORK statesmen, always on the prowl for something to tax, have been tempted lately to eliminate from the State Constitution a verboten on lotteries and other gambling devices. But even as they were drooling in joyous anticipation of the lug, or take, from the folly of the citizens they encountered opposition from reverend clergy of various denominations.

PEGLER.

The repeal of the anti-gambling section is disapproved by organizations which are themselves exempt from certain onerous taxes and which, in many cases, conduct gambling events such as keno, banko, raffles and disguised lotteries to augment their own tax-exempt incomes. These gambling activities would appear to be illegal, but the law is subtle, and, moreover, there is a disposition to regard the nobility of purpose of the games as justification. Yet when it is proposed that the State be empowered, though not necessarily required, to resort to the same means, among others, exempt institutions actively oppose the suggestion.

DISCUSSION of any issue in which any large religious organization is interested is fraught with risk. Members of this or that faith are inclined to regard the presentation of a dissenting opinion or the pointing out of an apparent inconsistency as an act of hostility. Nevertheless, the fact deserves pointing out that the present Federal income tax law contains a provision apparently intended to rescind the tax immunity of any religious organization which, to a substantial degree, attempts to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise. This clause mentions "corporations and any community chest, fund or foundation organized and operated exclusively for religious" purposes, and there might be a contest on the point that the religious groups which oppose the repeal of the antilottery section in New York do not answer this description.

As to that, however, an official authority of the Internal Revenue Bureau in New York has given an opinion that they do. This authority decided, however, that they would still be exempt through his interpretation of the very vague and insubstantial word "substantial." He held that opposition to the child labor amendment, for example, or the gambling amendment, both urged as reforms by those who advocate them, does not constitute a "substantial" part of the activities of these organizations. It is a fine interpretation which to me appears to evade a difficult and very embarrassing duty which Congress intended to impose on the Treasury.

A lay member of a religious organization recently argued that the enforcement of this clause in certain circumstances would hamper or penalize the clergy in the performance of their holy office. I agree that it might, but, nevertheless, that law is there, and it was adopted deliberately. And if you agree with the tax authority of the Revenue Bureau that such organizations are meant by the act, then you must conclude that the attempt to prevent repeal of the anti-lottery section is an attempt to influence legislation.

* * * *

THERE WAS A decision by the Appellate Division recently holding that the trustees of a Masonic institution must pay real estate taxes on that portion of a property in New York city which is rented for commercial purposes. At the time it was said that if this ruling were applied to all similar cases in New York from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 would be added to the tax rolls.

This decision would seem to conflict in principle, at least, with a cherished decision by the United States Supreme Court which held that even though a religious institution engaged in retail commerce, in competition with taxpaying private merchants, the income from that commerce is still exempt. The court held that the source of the income was of no interest. The purpose for which it was spent was the sole consideration in deciding the tax immunity.

I argue, with complete freedom from religious feeling or prejudice, that opposition by religious bodies to repeal of the antilottery section is an attempt to interfere with a legislative proposal intended to confer great benefit on the States and its people, including many of no religious attachment.

Job Security

Social Security Board Executive Traces Growth Of Public Employment Services And Unemployment Insurance.

By Frank Bane.

Following are extracts from an address delivered yesterday by the executive director of the Social Security Board before a meeting of the International Association of Public Employment Services at Ottawa.

WE NOW HAVE in this country a single, Nation-wide system designed to promote the job security of workers. Its purpose is to furnish work opportunity and work protection. And its interlocking parts are public employment service and unemployment compensation.

Federal activity in the employment field started during the World War, though the national concern, manifested in the panic year of 1907, cast before it at least a faint shadow of what was to come. The first actual, but tentative, steps toward employment service were the by-product of the world shattering events of 1914. War in Europe reduced immigration almost to the vanishing point. Thus cut off from its ordinary functions, the Federal Bureau of Immigration, acting under its legal authority to "direct workers to opportunities for profitable employment," transformed itself in fact, if not in name, into an employment service. This transformation was further justified by the fact that, with the falling off of transatlantic trade in the early war years, American workers were up against serious unemployment. But this did not last long.

When, in 1917, the United States entered the war, the shoe was on the other foot. Unemployment vanished; and the problem was not to find jobs for workers, but workers for jobs. Under this impetus Federal interest in the employment field was officially recognized for the first time, and the United States Employment Service, as an independent unit of the Department of Labor, came into being in January, 1918. In its first year, with nearly 11,000,000 requests for workers and about 6,000,000 workers referred to jobs, this service saw a peak not reached subsequently. But it was regarded strictly as a war measure, and though not formally abandoned after the Armistice, its funds were drastically reduced and its activities correspondingly limited.

Experience During War Indicated Need.

THIS EXPERIENCE, on the whole far from satisfactory in itself, had at least the effect of emphasizing the need for a more permanent and effective national employment service. In 1919 a group of State and Federal employment officers, labor leaders and others recommended the establishment of a thorough and comprehensive public employment service, on the basis of Federal-State co-operation. Their recommendations, embodied in the Kenyon-Nolan bill, were presented to Congress, but failed of passage.

With the post-war depression, the problem of unemployment again came to the fore. And at the suggestion of Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, President Harding called a conference on unemployment in 1921. This conference, with Mr. Hoover as chairman, also urged that an active and effective national employment service be organized to replace the skeletonized remains of the war-time agency.

In commenting on the need for such a service, Secretary Hoover stated that "One of the causes of ill will that weighs heavily upon the community is the whole problem of unemployment. I know of nothing more important than the necessity to develop further remedy, first, for the vast calamities of unemployment in the cyclic periods of depression, and, second, some assurance to the individual of reasonable economic security—to remove the fear of total family disaster in loss of the job . . . I am not one who regards these matters as incalculable . . . There is a solution somewhere and its working out will be the greatest blessing yet given to our economic system, both to the employer and the employe."

That was what was thought and said in 1921. But the fact remains that nothing was done then or in the next ten years years either to find this "not incalculable" solution for unemployment, or to make Nation-wide employment service a reality. For during the rest of the 1920's, prosperity persuaded most Americans that these needs and these problems were dreams—old, bad dreams that they were done with. The only development in the Federal employment service in these years was the placement work for veterans, leading to the special Veterans' Division established in 1930. By that time the depression was in full swing, and with it, the old idea of a Nation-wide Federal-State employment service, never quite dead, was again resuscitated. In 1931 the Wagner bill, embodying provisions for a co-operative Federal-State employment service substantially like those proposed in 1919, passed both House and Senate.

Wagner Bill Veto Set Up Federal Plan.

THIS BILL was vetoed, however; and a Federally administered employment office plan was established throughout the country. The intent of this plan seemed to be to co-operate with State and local employment services; what actually happened was, in effect, that the Federal offices tended to compete with, rather than to complement, the other services in the communities where they were set up.

As a result of these ill-starred developments, the United States had to wait until 1933 for the Wagner-Peyser act to place Federal activity in the employment field upon an effective basis. This law authorizes the Federal Government to co-operate with the States, through the familiar grant-in-aid principle, in establishing and maintaining public employment services.

But important as this step was and hard as its supporters had worked for it, the struggle was only half won in 1933. We still had no job insurance. Not that the need had gone unrecognized. Beginning with the pioneer efforts of Massachusetts in 1916, not less than 180 unemployment compensation proposals had been introduced into 28 State Legislatures during succeeding years. Yet Wisconsin was the only State which actually succeeded in passing such a law prior to Congressional consideration of the social security bill. Unemployment compensation, as finally embodied in the social security act, is the direct outgrowth of all this past effort and past experience.

This inclusion in the act of a provision requiring that "payment of unemployment compensation shall be made solely through public employment services in the State or such other agencies as the Social Security Board may approve" recognizes that employment service and unemployment compensation are mutually complementary parts of the same system.

This emphasis on the practical necessity of unification is in line with the experience of other industrial nations which have preceded us in this field. All the western European countries have integrated their unemployment compensation and public employment services. Even where the employment service was developed first, both services were brought together under one agency as soon as unemployment compensation went into operation. The kind of unification toward which the United States is now working thus has precedents in the historical development and administrative experience of social insurance systems elsewhere.

51 Jurisdictions Covered By End Of '37.

BY 1937—four years after the passage of the Wagner-Peyser act and two years after the passage of the social security act—every State in the Union, together with the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Alaska, was co-operating with the Federal Government in both public employment service and unemployment compensation. In 49 of these 51 jurisdictions both services are under the direction of the same overhead State agency. As a result of the expanded employment service activities necessitated by this new joint set-up, the coast-to-coast network of Federal-State labor exchanges has grown enormously; more than 1,600 public employment offices are now in actual operation.

Another milestone was passed last January, when benefits became payable in 22 States. Up to that time, Wisconsin, where benefits became payable in July, 1936, was the only State to have reached this stage of full operation. This past April two more States began benefit payments, bringing the total to 25. The remainder will follow suit during the coming months—four by or before September, 20 next December or January, and the last two the following July.

As of last December 15, about 18,000,000 workers were in jobs covered by the 51 State unemployment compensation laws. Because of labor turn-over, the total coverage under these programs is probably from 25 to 50 per cent higher than this estimate of covered employment on a particular date.

Japan's Generals Take Over.

OF THE SEVEN major posts in the Japanese cabinet, three are now occupied by generals, two others by admirals. Between them the fighting services have the ministries of foreign affairs, war, navy, education and home affairs. Only the premier, Fumimaro Konoye, and the new finance minister, Seihin Ikeda, are civilians.

Now it is no secret that the military elements have for a very long period of time ruled the roost in Japan. The Shogunate which governed Japan for centuries before the Restoration of 1867 was a military dictatorship along feudal lines. The Restoration itself was the work of military elements. And having been responsible for the creation of modern Japan, these same elements saw to it that they would remain in control.

* * * *

TO BE SURE, Japan was not untouched by the wave of liberalism that swept the world in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. In due course Japan received a constitution which provided for the establishment of a parliament. Later, universal manhood suffrage was instituted. And for a brief period following the election of 1929 the civilian elements felt themselves strong enough to cut army appropriations and, despite strong opposition from the navy, ratify the London naval limitation agreement.

But this evolution away from military feudalism toward liberal democracy was more apparent than real. The Japanese constitution itself provided that the ministers of war and navy should be directly responsible to the emperor rather than to the cabinet as a whole or to parliament and that they should be respectively an army officer and a naval officer. In other words, no government could be formed in Japan that did not meet with the approval of the fighting services and no government could remain in office without the consent of the army and the navy.

WHAT DIFFERENCE does it make, some will rightly ask, that the elements which have exercised power through more or less willing puppets take the actual reins of power in their own hands?

The answer is that so far as the actual government of Japan is concerned, it makes no difference whatever. Koki Hirota, the outgoing foreign minister, is a civilian. Kazushige Ugaki, his successor, happens to be a general. This does not mean that Japanese foreign policy will any more or any less than in the past be more than the instrument of the army and the navy as it has been for lo, these many years. And the same fact is true regarding the other changes that have just occurred in the Konoye cabinet, most notably the addition of Gen. Sadao Araki as minister of education.

NONETHELESS the packing of the cabinet with generals and admirals is an event of far-reaching importance. For in the past they have preferred to dominate the government without running it. Now they are going to run the government as well as dominate it.

This goes contrary to age-old attitudes. During all the many centuries of the eclipse of the emperor's power, for instance, no military leader, however powerful, sought to seize the throne. They preferred to let the emperor alone but to keep him as a sacred figurehead. Technically the Shotgun was only the emperor's leading general, the commander of the imperial forces. Actually, and it was particularly true during the Tokugawa period that preceded the Restoration, the Shotgun could say with Louis XVI: "The state? I am the state."

* * * *

THE SYSTEM of indirect control, of using the formal apparatus of government as a screen behind which to operate, worked so well for Japan's military elements that they have had every reason for keeping it. Thus only the most pressing circumstances could have been responsible for abandoning it as they have done at this time.

No longer can the militarists evade responsibility for any untoward developments. No longer can they attribute Japan's failures, whatever they may be, to the intrigue of politicians or the incompetence of civilians in the cabinet. To a very large extent they are now the cabinet.

What led them to take this step is not difficult to conjecture. The war in China has not been going any too well. Very grave sacrifices have been made to make possible the conquest of Peiping and Tientsin, of Shanghai and Nanking and now of Suchow. But the Chinese continue to resist.

* * * *

SOME TIME AGO, in anticipation of a prolonged war, the Konoye government put through parliament a national mobilization measure which, if drastically applied, will transform Japan into a completely totalitarian state. Though in the final analysis ineffective to prevent the passage of this measure, the industrial and commercial elements made a strong fight against it. Now, as on occasions in the past, the civilian resistance to military domination was manifest. But the generals are determined that nothing must stand in the way of victory on the mainland. And they themselves have taken over the task of winning that victory.

It is a great gamble. If they are successful they will be more powerful than ever in Japan. But if they lose, the very imposing edifice of power which they have built up over so long a period of years is likely to crumble into dust. Anyway, for the first time in Japan's history the people who hold power are the same as those who wield it.

Hitler's Nemesis

By Hendrik Willem Von Loon.

The Spirit Of Oliver Cromwell.

A FEW WEEKS AGO I ventured to make a prediction at a meeting: "Another 12 months will see the end of Adolf Hitler himself."

Let me make clear at the outset that I do not belong to that group of people—not inconsiderable in number—who pooh-pooh the whole idea of Adolf Hitler, who call him unpleasant names and who apparently believe you can get rid of a dictator by telling a few funny stories at his expense. I do not see it that way.

What I am about to say is not the result of wishful thinking or of deliberately underestimating the ability of the Chancellor of the Third Reich. No, my conviction that Adolf Hitler will lose out in the end, and within a comparatively short space of time, is based upon the consideration that he does not know his history.

All through all the written works of Dr. Hitler, you will come across evidence of his almost pathetic ignorance of the past. If he did know history, both he and his little playmate in Rome would realize that there are now and that there have been for several centuries in the past, two entirely different sorts of England; and that to judge England by the group that happens to be in power at the present moment is about as dangerous as to judge America by the party that happens to have control of the machinery of government in Washington.

THERE IS no need for Adolf Hitler (nor for Benito Mussolini) to worry about Neville Chamberlain. But one of these days he will come up against the shade of Oliver Cromwell, and then let him look out, for the spirit of Oliver Cromwell will defeat him as it has defeated everyone these last 300 years who judged England merely by what appeared upon the surface and not by those invisible qualities which make this the most interesting because essentially the most decent of all nations.

If I felt inclined to render the Chancellor of the Third Reich a most useful service—which I don't—I would send him a copy of Thomas Carlyle's "Letters and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell" or some other first-rate biography of the Lord Protector, and on the fly-leaf I would write: "My dear Chancellor Hitler: This is the story of the man who will defeat you before the end of another year. I know that he is only a ghost, but he is a living ghost, for part of his spiritual heritage is ingrained so deeply in the hearts of his fellowmen that they will sink their island rather than submit to that which they know to be wrong."

Ex-TVA Chief Bitterly Assails His Successor

By the United Press.

Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted chairman of the embattled Tennessee Valley Authority directorate, went over the head of a joint congressional investigating committee yesterday to issue an unprecedented statement claiming chairmanship of the agency and attacking veracity of testimony of Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, who succeeded him.

The engineer-educator, discharged by President Roosevelt in March after his feud with fellow directors, came into the open, wrote an open letter to his namesake denouncing the latter's testimony before the congressional inquiry Thursday which pictured A. E. Morgan as attempting to enforce a "rule or ruin" policy and as authoring "visionary" and "alarming" social and economic schemes.

Committee in Recess.

The letter was made public while the committee was in recess until next Wednesday, before any of the ousting directorate had been cross-examined.

Arthur Morgan, on the witness stand, accused Harcourt Morgan and David E. Lilienthal, the other director, of deception, collusion, mismanagement and conspiracy. They in turn charged him with attempting to "sabotage" the New Deal's power rate "yardstick" program when they refused to allow him to dominate them.

The letter vigorously defended necessity for the alleged "visionary" and "alarming" schemes cited by Harcourt Morgan and warned that as soon as he can get access to TVA files he will make additional replies.

Signs as "Chairman."

The letter was addressed to Harcourt Morgan as "vice chairman," the title he held before the TVA shake-up, and was signed by Arthur Morgan as "chairman," indicating he does not recognize President Roosevelt's action in removing him.

The letter assailed Harcourt Morgan's testimony concerning one of the "visionary" proposals which called for investigation of the ethics of real estate men in the TVA area. It explained that the proposal was made because a "reprehensible" scheme was being planned at the time to speculate in real estate in the area on the strength of imminent TVA activities and that steps to save small investors from "exploitation by high-pressure salesmen" were imperative.

A. E. Morgan also said that his proposed establishment of a cement plant, which Harcourt Morgan had attacked, saved the TVA more than $1,000,000 on a single contract and caused lower levels of prices in other deals.

New Documents Promised.

Referring to the "rule-or-ruin" charges, he said that the other two directors could not take over active duties at the start of the agency in 1933, leaving him with the necessity of making "immediate decisions," and, for this reason, he suggested that he should be given the title of general manager.

It was learned that Arthur Morgan has also requested his office in Dayton, Ohio, to forward documents and records, which, he believes, will show that Harcourt Morgan's testimony is contradicted by his own memoranda and letters.

Taxpayers Oppose Bills for Firemen

Opposition to the bills which would permit District firemen and policemen to retire at 55 and establish a five-day week for firemen was voiced yesterday by the Washington Taxpayers Association.

In a letter signed by Rufus S. Lusk, president, and addressed to presidents of various civic bodies, the association declared $413,000 would be added to the District budget as a result of these measures.

Congressional Speakers At Luncheon Here Today

"The Public Ownership Program in Congress" will be discussed at a luncheon of the People's Lobby in Wesley Hall, 1703 K street northwest, at 12:30 Saturday.

Speakers will be Senator Frazier, "Farm Marketing Corporation," Senator Lundeen, "Railroads," Representative Thomas R. Amell, "Natural Resources;" Representative Charles G. Binderup, "Banking and Credit;" Representative Henry G. Tiegan, "Iron and Steel Industry."

Defeated on Bill, DeValera Dissolves Eire Lower House

Dublin, May 27 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, smarting under his first parliamentary defeat in six years, tonight dissolved the Dail Eireann (lower house) of Parliament and ordered general elections June 17 to select new members.

DeVALERA.

On Wednesday night the Dail, by a vote of 51 to 50, adopted over government objections a motion by William T. Cosgrave, leader of the opposition Fine Gall (United Ireland) Party, calling for establishment of a civil service arbitration board to deal with government employes' grievances.

The vote, however, was not one of confidence and De Valera's order for dissolution of the lower house came as a surprise.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Field Report.

Notes from our field agent 2-R: Farm Security Administration personnel is diminishing; the force, it appears likely, will be reduced in Washington from 1,300 to about 750 by the first of July. The ouster will include 10 employes at $5,000 or more per annum who have been or will be notified of reparation on or before June 30.

Uncle Sam pays a rent bill annually in Washington amounting to $2,500,000 . . . At the peak, Secretary Ickes had applications from 230,000 persons seeking jobs . . . Uncle Sam is in the liquor business, having 500,000 gallons of rum in storage down in the Virgin Islands—which we always heard was a pleasant place for one reason or another.

Secret Service will shortly seek 15 additional agents at $2,600 per annum, it is rumored . . . If common arithmetic means anything, GAO will drop approximately 250 emergency employes around June 30; all the calculations work out that way . . . Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed.) Smith is out to succeed himself in the S. C. primaries and Edgar A. Brown wants to replace him.

The Third Virginia District has sent to Congress a Representative of whom, we predict, more will be heard later on. The Representative in question, Dave E. Satterfield, has had the good sense to hold his horns in while doing his apprenticeship, but in him are all the qualifications of Virginia's traditional statesmanship and he'll be heard from—favorably.

The U. F. W. A. has been doing some serious dickering with Post-office Department's Smith W. Purdum regarding the $500,000 intended for administrative raises to custodial employes but which sum has been threatened with impounding . . . Edward B. Tucker, of Greer, S. C., has been added to the staff of the Washington Federal Bulletin, Harry G. Ritner, the editor, informs us. Tucker, a former Senate page, is well versed in legislative matters and will prove a valuable member in reporting legislative activities . . .

Prof. Gunnar Myrdal, who has been giving a course of lectures at Harvard, will speak twice under the auspices of the Agriculture Department Graduate School and the graduate schoof of American University, in the Agriculture Auditorium (South Building) on June 1 and 2, from 5 to 6 p. m. each day. The first lecture is "The Population Problem and Social Policy;" the second is "Population Trends in Relation to Agriculture in Sweden." Luncheon conferences have been arranged in connection with these lectures. Those wishing to attend should contact Dr. O. E. Baker, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, or Dean Griffiths, of American University . . .

The librarian of the FCA library is having a dreadful time trying to squeeze through the current fiscal year on what's left of the magnanimous $750 the library is allowed for periodicals, newspapers and maps. Now requests for subscriptions and maps that appear to be urgently needed in FCA operations have almost exhausted the year's appropriation—and there are six weeks of the fiscal year before a new appropriation will become available. On top of this tribulation, they are sending out an urgent call for return of the "Virginia Law Review," which has been missing from the FCA law library for some time. Withal, the library may smile through its tears, for the taker will have nothing for his pains except what must be some awfully dry reading . . .

Shortly after Gen Hines (V. A.) promised an inquiry into general conditions in the V. A. facilities, word went out from here to lessen the hours of work on facilities employes wherever possible, and some improvement, in spots, is reported.

Civil service announces an open competitive examination for the job of mechanic-bombsight in the Naval Proving Grounds, Dahlgren, Va. The salary is $1.20 to $1.32 an hour (40-hour week). The requirements are: At least three years' experience in electrical and mechanical work, including maintenance of storage batteries, motors and generators, wiring of electrical circuits and lathe operation in shopwork, besides at least one year of shopwork in testing, adjusting, or manufacturing modern bombsights of the gyro stabilized type. The age limits are 20 and 48, and the closing date on applications is June 14.

A waterpipe broke Thursday night in Agriculture's South Building and unloosed a curtain of water and a cloud of steam that spread dismay among a class of students in a room below.

A party of F. C. A. Club bikers will leave the Tidal Basin at 1:15 p. m. today for a ride through West Potomac Park and around the Speedway. There will be a morning trip through Rock Creek Park, beginning at 10 a. m. on Memorial Day. Reservations for either trip can be made through Alma Day, F. C. A., extension 251 . . . The F. C. A. Chorus presents its spring concert next Thursday evening in adjoining conferences rooms A, B and C of the Departmental Building.

More than 160 young people, representing 1,192,000 rural boys and girls enrolled in 4-H clubs, will attend the twelfth consecutive national 4-H Club encampment to be held in West Potomac Park here June 16 to 22. Those who will address them include Secretary Wallace, Assistant Secretary Harry L. Brown, Dr. W. R. Gregg, Weather Bureau chief; Allen Eaton, of the Russell Sage Foundation, and Miss Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

The Civil Service Commission announces an open competition examination for the job of shipfitter at the Navy Yard, Charleston, S. C. The salary is $6.91 to $7.87 a day. Applicants must have completed a regular four-year apprenticeship or have had four years of practical experience. The age limits are 20 and 55. The closing date is June 21.

Chavez Urges That U. S. Avoid All 'Isms' Except Americanism

Memorial Day Exercises Held by Bureau of Engraving and Printing Legion Post; Other Rites Planned by Patriotic Groups Today.

America must avoid any "ism" except Americanism and keep her feet on the ground in a "jittery world," Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, told the American Legion Post of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at their memorial exercises yesterday in Rotunda Hall.

"We must take no chances," said Chavez. "We must always be calm and logical, and we must always build for America.

"Communism and fascism are things which must never come to our shores," he said. "It behooves us to take pains to be logical."

Other speakers included Frederick Johnson, past national commander of the American Legion, and Heywood N. Saunders, commander of the printing post of the legion. The Marine Band orchestra provided music.

Yesterday afternoon the Stephen F. McGroarty Post of the Legion held services in Arlington Cemetery.

The United Spanish War Veterans and the American Legion, together with the Grand Army of the Republic, the Gold Star Mothers and other patriotic groups have planned services for today.

Meeting in Congressional Cemetery, Henry W. Lawton Camp, Spanish War Veterans, will hold services, while William B. Cushing Auxiliary, Sons of Union Veterans, and Gen. M. Emmett Urell Camp, Spanish War Veterans, will hold similar services at 2:30 p. m. in Holy Rood Cemetery.

William W. Washington, Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas and Sergt. George Berry Camps, Spanish War Veterans, and James Reese Europe Post, American Legion, will conduct services at Mount Zion and Union Baptist Cemetery at 3 p. m.

War dead will be honored by George Washington Post of the Legion, and Col. John Jacob Astor Camp, Spanish War Veterans, at Rock Creek Cemetery at noon, while the American Gold Star Mothers will hold services at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at the markers on Sixteenth street northwest, near Walter Reed Hospital.

Women's Relief Corps units of the Grand Army will meet this evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Sisters' Monument, at Connecticut avenue and M street, while Jane A. Delano Post of the Legion will gather at 5:30 this afternoon at Miss Delano's grave in Arlington.

District Post, No. 17, Irish War Veterans of the U. S. A., last night made public its Memorial Day program. This morning Boy Scouts representing Nativity Parish will go to Mount Olivet Cemetery and place flags and flowers on the graves of all soldiers.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, of Immaculate Conception Church, will celebrate a memorial field mass for the soldier dead at Mount Olivet. The Misses Ethel M. Roddy and Marie V. Note will sing, accompanied by the Knights of Columbus Band.

Representative Frank Towey, of New Jersey, will speak, and Sergt. Frank Witchey, of Fort Myer, will sound taps. The public is invited.

Special Camp Today For Reserve Officers

A contact camp for the instruction of reserve officers will be held at 2 p. m. today in Fort Myer, Organized Reserves headquarters announced.

Included in the schedule are demonstrations of the operation of a squadron of cavalry when acting as advance guard for a larger unit, an airplane attack, combined mounted and dismounted action, firing by a battalion of field artillery, signal communciation and horsemanship.

Ex-Gov. Reed Announces For G.O.P. Senate Race

Parsons, Kans., May 27 (A.P.).—Clyde M. Reed, former Kansas Governor, declared his candidacy today for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, to seek the seat now held by Senator George McGill, Democrat. Reed is a newspaper publisher. Other Republican candidates are State Senator Dallas Knapp, the Rev. Gerald Winrod, anti-Communist and anti-Fascist, and the Rev. Jesse C. Fisher.

Chaplain Examinations Set for July by Army

The War Department announced yesterday that competitive examinations for appointments of chaplains in the Army will be held here in July.

Only duly accredited clergymen of the Church of Christ, Methodist Episcopal Church South, Reformed Church in America or any colored Protestant denomination are eligible to take the examinations, officials said.

Libraries to Close.

The central building of the Public Library and all branches and sub-branches will be closed tomorrow and Monday, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, announced yesterday. The Sunday closing hereafter will remain in force until September 15.

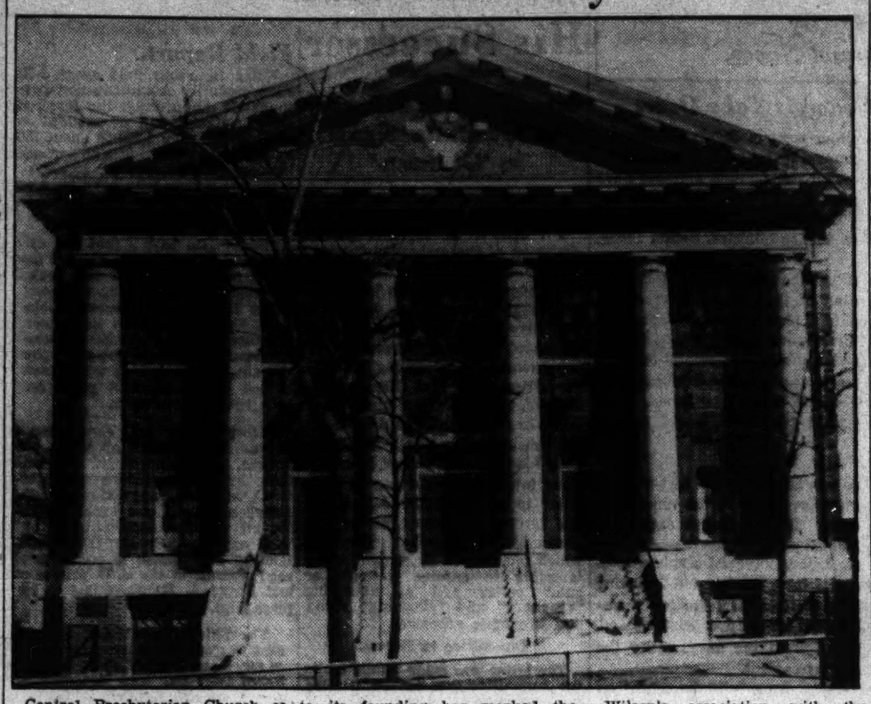
Confederate Chaplain and Union General Started Central Presbyterian Church



Central Presbyterian Church at Fifteenth and Irving streets, which celebrates its seventieth anniversary tomorrow, owes its existence to a conversation which took place just after the Civil War between a Confederate Army chaplain and a Union general.

The Rev. A. W. Pitzer called on Gen. Thomas Ewing early in 1868 to discuss the organization of a Southern Presbyterian church, a denomination not represented in Washington at the time. Gen. Ewing gave him encouragement and promised to pay the congregation's rent until it became established.

The same month about 12 persons met under Dr. Pitzer's leadership in the old Columbia law building, previously Trinity Church and subsequently the original home of Calvary Baptist and the First Congregational Church. Meeting informally as a Sunday school, the group was organized four months later as Central Church, with 27 members and two elders.

The co-operative spirit which led to its founding has marked the church's history ever since. The building fund for the chapel built five years later at Third and I streets northwest was raised entirely by the members, who sold their jewelry and silver plate for the cause. One of the largest contributions was from a woman who sold a valuable Correggio painting to Levi P. Morton, later Vice President of the United States.

A church building was completed in 1885 by the same method. The congregation has always been proud of the fact that it charges no pew rents and holds no bazaars to raise its running expenses.

President Wilson was prominently associated with Central Presbyterian during the war years. He attended services there the first Sunday after his inauguration in 1913 and later worshipped regularly with his family. He laid the cornerstone for the present building, which was completed in 1914. Four years later he spoke at the church's jubilee service.

Wilson's association with the church was commemorated in 1925 by the erection of a bronze tablet, unveiled by President Coolidge. Another link between the church and the White House was formed in 1930, when President Hoover laid the cornerstone of the new Sunday school building.

Central has had but two pastors during its 70-year history. Dr. Pitzer was succeeded in 1906 by the Rev. James H. Taylor, D. D., the present minister. Dr. Taylor has seen six of his parishioners enter the Presbyterian ministry, another young man become a medical missionary and nine women undertake home or foreign mission work.

At tomorrow's morning and evening anniversary services, the Rev. Ben R. Lacy, jr., D. D., president of Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, will preach. A third observance will take place Tuesday evening, when the ministers and missionaries among the church members have been invited to speak.

Dr. Jesse Bader Will Preach at National City

Officer of Federal Council to Take Memorial Day as His Theme.

Dr. Jesse M. Bader, executive secretary of the department of evangelism, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, again will occupy National City Christian Church's pulpit tomorrow morning.

His message will be based on the Memorial Day theme, his subject being "Lest We Forget." J. Horace Smithey, barytone, will sing De Koven's "Recessional."

"The Search for Utopia" is the subject of the Rev. Ivan H. Dugan, associate pastor of the church, will discuss during the evening service.

Third. The Rev. C. N. Williams, pastor, will preach on "God's Memory and Mine" at the morning service.

Fifteenth Street. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor, will preach at the morning service on "Keep in Remembrance."

The young people will have charge of the evening service, Katherine Pyne will lead.

Ninth Street. Maurice Hughes will preside at morning services tomorrow, the final Sunday of youth month in the church. The Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor, will preach on "The Nation's Memorial."

Columbia Heights. Memorial Day will be celebrated at the Columbia Heights Christian Church on Sunday morning, when the Rev. A. P. Wilson's topic will be "Life Out of Death." A baptismal service will be held on Sunday evening and the topic will be "The Obedience of Love."

Final Services Today For Admiral Magruder

Funeral services for Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, who died Thursday in Jamestown, R. I., will be held at 10 a. m. today in Fort Myer Chapel with Chaplain R. D. Workman officiating. Interment with full military honors will be held in Arlington Cemetery.

Carmelites Begin Week-end Retreat

The Third Order of Carmelites will have a closed retreat at the Washington Retreat House, 4000 Harewood road northeast, beginning today and closing May 30. Elizabeth Marmion, prioress of the Third Order of Carmelites, is chairman of arrangements.

The Rev. Thomas M. Kilduff, O. C. D., of Catholic University, will be the retreat master. This retreat was arranged under the auspices of the Washington Retreat League.

Mr. Kellogg, Danbury, to Give Sermon at St. Stephen's Church

Mr. Wilbur Will Be Guest Pastor in Connecticut; Dr. Hart Announces His Topic for Sermon at St. John's.

The Rev. Hamilton Kellogg, rector of St. James' Church, Danbury, Conn., will be the guest preacher at St. Stephen and the Incarnation tomorrow, exchanging pulpits with the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur, who will go to Danbury.

Sherman J. Kreuzberg, choirmaster at St. Stephen's, held that position at St. James' before coming to Washington.

St. John's Church. Expectation Sunday will be observed with a special sermon by Dr. Oliver J. Hart at the 9:30 a. m. service on "What Do We Expect?" The sermon will be repeated at the 11 o'clock service. There will be the Holy Communion at 8 a. m. and evening prayer and sermon by the Rev. Mr. White at 8 o'clock.

Church of the Epiphany. There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 o'clock. At the 11 o'clock service the rector will preach the baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of Gunston Hall, and at this service there will be special Ascensiontide music by the choir. The Young People's Fellowship will meet at 6:30, and the evening service at 8 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Fraser will preach.

Rock Creek. The Rev. Everett Holland Jones, canon and chancellor of the Washington Cathedral, will be the guest speaker at 9:30 a. m. Flag Day exercises. His theme for this service will be "Patriotism Needed."

In addition to the pupils of the church school ten Boy Scout troops and Girl Scout troops will participate in this service. The Rev. Dr. F. J. Bohanan will conduct this service as well as the 11 o'clock and preach the sermon.

Chapel of the Redeemer. The special preacher at 9:30 o'clock will be the Rev. Richard Aselford, rector of Grace Church, Woodside, and newly elected dean of the Northern Convocation.

Church of Our Saviour. At 11 a. m. morning prayer and sermon, the Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills will preach on "Christ's Sense of Mission." This will be the sixth sermon in a series on "The Character of Christ."

Transfiguration. Bishop Freeman will be at Transfiguration for confirmation on Tuesday evening. Services on Sunday will be at the usual hour. The Rev. J. J. Queally will officiate and preach.

Mrs. Spaid Willed Income of Estate

Mrs. Ada Bain Spaid, widow of William W. Spaid, banker and broker, will receive the entire income from his vast holdings during her lifetime, it was shown in the will filed in District Court yesterday. The value of the estate was not estimated.

Mr. Spaid, who was senior partner in the brokerage firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., directed that the bulk of his estate be held in trust by Mrs. Spaid and her son, William Spaid.

The will suggested the son receive $100,000, provided that amount did not exceed a fourth of the estate. The son is a member of the Arizona Legislature. Upon Mrs. Spaid's death, the trust is to be dissolved and the principal given to the son or his heirs.

Rev. H. G. Burroughs Speaks at Service

"Practical Spirtualism" will be the subject of the address by the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs at the Church of Two Worlds tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Glenn Hanson, saxophonist, will be the soloist.

On Wednesday evening there will be a short lecture, followed by a message service conducted by the minister.

Dr. Ulysses Pierce Back From Boston Unitarian Meeting

Returning from Boston, where he attended the annual meetings of the American Unitarian Association and allied societies, Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, minister of All Souls' Church, will occupy his pulpit at the 11 o'clock service and preach on "The Ministry of Memory."

The adult class in comparative religion, in connection with the Church School which meets at 9:45 o'clock, Dr. W. K. Alexander, of Madras University, will speak on "The Brahmo-Somaj and the Aryo-Somaj."

Delegates to the Boston meetings, included Mrs. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Mrs. Edward F. Rowse, Mrs. Eugene F. Mueller, Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Bollinger and Gen. Henry Clay Newcomer, will address the class in current problems on "Highlights of Anniversary Week."

Universalist National Memorial. Dr. Frederic W. Perkins will preach on "A Nation Saved for What?" tomorrow at 11 o'clock. On Wednesday at 12:30 the Mission Circle and the Ladies' Aid Association will hold their annual joint picnic at Hains Point.

Blackwelder's Spring Series To Be Finished

'Home and Youth in a Modern World' to Be Subject Tomorrow Night.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, will conclude a spring series of sermons in the Lutheran Church of the Reformation tomorrow night with a talk on "Home and Youth in a Modern World." A question and answer period will be part of the service.

"Christlike Freedom" will be the subject of the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor, at 8:30 a. m. Dr. Blackwelder will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Tired Radical."

"What Would Christ Mean in the Non-Christian Home?" is the subject the Intermediate Luther League will consider at 6 p. m. tomorrow, under the leadership of Miss Hazel M. Anderson. Miss Margaret Wenger will lead the Senior Luther League at 7 o'clock on "Bible Excursions."

Grace. Completing a program of preparation for the coming of Pentecost, pastor and people of Grace Lutheran Church will unite in a special worship service Sunday at 11 a. m. The pastor, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, will preach on the Gospel lesson for the day, taking for his theme, "Even the Spirit of Truth." Guest soloist will be Harold Meyer, tenor soloist of Faith Lutheran Church, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Concordia. The last of a series of five sermons on the Apostles' Creed will be delivered by the Rev. Charles Enders Sunday morning. The sermon topic in both the German service at 10 a. m. and the English service at 11:15 a. m. will be "Eternal Life."

On Sunday afternoon the Rev. Charles Enders will conduct the annual memorial service in Prospect Hill Cemetery at 3 o'clock. He will be assisted by Raymond Escherich, tenor, and John R. Monroe, organist.

St. Paul's. As a Memorial Day meditation the sermon by the pastor, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, tomorrow morning will deal with "A Little Leaven." At the evening service the sermon will reflect the idea of Ascension Day, the theme being "Out of Sight But Everywhere."

St. Mark's. Children's Day will be observed at the 11 a. m. service. The members of the Sunday school will present the pageant, "Gates Ajar."

Christ. A Memorial Day service will be held Sunday morning. The subject of the sermon by the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, the pastor, will be "Christ's Ascension and Our Heavenly Home."

Bishop Freeman Plans to Preach Evensong Sermon

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver the sermon at the people's evensong service in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 4 o'clock. The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of the Cathedral and warden of the College of Preachers, will be the preacher at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. Music for both of these services will be furnished by the Cathedral choir of men and boys.

The Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. Group pilgrimages will be held immediately following the 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. services for out-of-town worshipers.

The general confirmation for candidates who did not find it convenient to be confirmed in their own churches, will be held in the great choir of the Cathedral on Thursday, June 2, at 4 p. m.

Necromancy Topic Of Religious Group

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced," is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden text is from Matthew 24:4: "Take heed that no man deceive you."

Among the citations is the following from the Bible: "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingom of our God, and the power of His Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night" (Revelation 12:10).

The lesson-sermon includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is no power apart from God. Omnipotence has all power and to acknowledge any other power is to dishonor God."

Cleveland Park. Dr. J. O. Knott will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "The Meaning of Pentecost." This closes the series on "The Appearances of Jesus During the Forty Days."

First Baptist Church to Hear Dr. Potorf, of American U.

Department of Religion Head to Give Sermon on 'Lost and Found;' Dr. Chesteen Smith Guest Preacher at Chevy Chase.

Dr. A. B. Potorf, head of the department of religion, American University, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist Church tomorrow morning in the absence of the pastor, who is attending the sessions of the Northern Baptist convention in Milwaukee. Dr. Potorf's subject will be "Lost and Found."

In the evening the speaker will be Walter T. Lawton, jr., a young member of the church who has just completed his second year at the Southern Baptist Seminary, Louisville.

Swedish services will be held in the church tomorrow afternoon with Dr. K. E. Carlson.

Chevy Chase. Dr. Chesteen Smith, former pastor of Hamline Methodist Church, will be the guest preacher tomorrow morning. The pastor, the Rev. Edward O. Clark, member of the finance and promotion board of the Northern Baptist convention, is attending the convention now in session at Milwaukee.

The Rev. Frank L. Griffin will preach at the evening service at 8 p. m.

Calvary. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, minister, will preach tomorrow morning on "Remember." A special musical program will be given at the evening service to be followed by a brief message by the minister's assistant, the Rev. F. E. Johnston, jr. Topic: "Unfinished Business." Those assisting in the latter service will by Marian Johnson and Donald Wayne Thomas.

Metropolitan. Dr. John Compton Ball will speak Sunday morning on "The Old, New and All Time Religion." New members will be received into the church at this service. At the evening hour Dr. Ball will speak on "The Capstone of All Memorials."

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. La Rue will speak at the morning service tomorrow on "Whatsoever Is Not of Faith Is Sin."

Sermon Slated On 'Education' By Dr. Rustin

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, will deliver a sermon on "Why Christian Education?" at morning services tomorrow in Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South.

The evening services will be in charge of the Mount Vernon Players who will present the one-act play, "The Valiant," by Middlemass and Hall. The cast includes: Lewis Buckingham, Joseph J. Sweeney, Delma Smith, Mary Jo Oslin and Howard Reed. Assisting in the production are William Spencer, jr., Mary A. Coe, V. V. Mills, Rachael Reid, Howard Reed, Vance Hines, Malven Oliver and Virgil E. Blackwell. Edward Perwins Mangum will be director.

Calvary M. E. South. The Rev. W. D. Keene will speak at the 11 o'clock service on "Our Church Schools." At 8 o'clock George H. Lamar, of Rockville, will speak at the joint Methodist meeting, in which Dumbarton, Congress Street and Mount Tabor churches will unite with Calvary. Mr. Lamar was a lay delegate from the Baltimore conference to the recent session of the general conference which met at Birmingham, Ala., in April, when the plan of union was passed.

Francis Asbury South. Rev. Albert P. Shirkey will preach at both services on Sunday. At the 11 o'clock service his subject will be "The Greater Self.'" At 8 o'clock he will speak on, "Daring to Prove It." The young people's meeting at 6:45 Sunday will be in charge of the missionary chairman, Miss Sadie Hutchison. The subject will be, "Africa."

Emory. Memorial Day and College Day will be observed in a combined service. The Emory Choir will furnish special music for the occasion and a tribute offered to religious and national leaders. The Rev. Horace E. Cromer will preach in the morning on "Deep Waters—A Memorial Day Sermon," and at the evening services he will offer the last in a series on Methodism. His subject will be, "The World Parish."

Dr. Daugherty to Talk.

Dr. Simpson B. Dougherty, pastor, will preach on "The Most Beautiful Word" at morning services tomorrow in Memorial United Brethren Church. Young people's groups will have charge of the 7:30 o'clock vesper service.

'Robin Hood' Opens Second Week at Earle

Technicolor Production Is Still a Smash Hit; Stage Bill Held.

"THE ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD." Warner Brothers picturization of the old English legend, adapted to the screen by Norman Reilly Raine and Seton I. Miller, starring Errol Flynn, supported by Olivia De Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Alan Hale, Ian Hunter, Eugene Pallette, Claude Rains, Melville Cooper, Herbert Mundin and Una O'Connor. Directed by Curtiz and Keighley. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis. At the Earle Theater.

This precedent-shattering hold-over of "The Adventures of Robin Hood" deserves much of the fuss being made about it. It is a fine, lusty, exhilarating adventure tale, told with speed, excitement, humor and beauty. It is the sort of thing which the movies can handle so well but all too often don't.

This particular Robin Hood legend is told as a legend should be, a neat mixture of the possible and the impossible. Robin is a true folk-hero and so he must be both Superman and Man. Naturally as Superman, he must win over all the archers of England, make daring raids, captures and escapes, and eventually triumph; but also naturally and humanly as a Man he can be bested, as he is by Little John, and can walk into traps, such as the archery tournament, from which he must be rescued. The folk who make folk-tales like to recognize both their dreams and themselves in their heroes.

A nice script, a superlative cast, an unusually excellent and stirring musical score, beautiful settings, costuming and photography—the only thing more that we could want is a better ending. There is such sweep and vigor and excitement about almost all of the picture that we cannot understand the completely unexciting fade-out. That uncertain little exit of Robin and His Lady.

Cast Uniformly Excellent.

Errol Flynn seems a perfect Robin Hood, maintaining the very excellent standard he has set since his meteoric debut as Capt. Blood. Again he has a chance to swashbuckle and does it both glamorously and naturally—a sizable feat. He and Basil Rathbone, as usual a satisfying arch-villain, seem to have been born to their purple and wear and handle capes and long sleeves and swords and duels and chivalry with eclat and ease.

Rathbone is particularly picturesque in color and the wardrobe department helped his dark handsomeness no end with its reds and blues and golds. Olivia De Havilland is a very beautiful Lady Marian; Melville Cooper, a delightfully timid Sheriff of Nottingham; Eugene Pallette, an excellent Friar Tuck, and Alan Hale must feel like Peter Pan, what with playing Little John 15 years after playing it the first time. He is quite perfect and is our choice for it in the 1950 version. Claude Rains is a dandified Prince John. Ian Hunter has little to do as King Richard, but does that little in kingly fashion.

See this picture by all means, relax mentally, sit on the edge of your chair physically and have a grand vicarious adventure in a colorful and romantic age and country. See it from the beginning.

The stage show also is a hold-over and well entitled to a second week. It can boast of graceful dancers, lovely voices, amusing and skillful juggling and a general air of well-being and smoothness. It fits nicely with the feature, definitely not being just something to sit through while you are waiting to see Robin again.

Metropolitan

"TORCHY BLANE IN PANAMA" First National picturization of a story by Anthony Coldeway, based on characters created by Frederick Nebel, adapted to the screen by George Bricker, featuring Lola Lane and Paul Kelly, with Tom Kennedy, Anthony Averill, Betty Compson, Frank Shannon, Hugh O'Connell and others. Directed by William Clemens. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

All the little girls studying how to be journalists are going to be a great trial to city editors when they get their diplomas and start hunting jobs, if they take "Torchy Blane in Panama" seriously.

Torchy is a great gal, who leaps and climbs and shinneys down ropes and does parachute jumping and wall climbing. Which is physical. Besides, she has an incredible "swindle sheet," which enables her to travel on luxury liners, buy new outfits on shipboard, etc.

So go the minus factors. Not to include the snailish pace of the action, notwithstanding several fist slingings by brawny he-men. Technically, the plot is all shot, possibly as a prelude to summer sluggishness in movie fare.

Lola Lane is Torchy this time, and Paul Kelly is the sergeant, and Tom Kennedy his stooge. Anthony Averill, Larry Williams and old-time star, Betty Compson, supply relief. Miss Compson, in particular, is very good in a very bad role.

Gets Her Man.

Torchy is on the trail of a murderer-bandit, who is masquerading as a Loyal Leopard, which lodge seems a weak parody of some other real lodges. She gets hunches, convinces her editor that her methods are best, crosses swords journalistically with a handsome male reporter and gets her man.

Rather wasted are the possibly good talents of Miss Lane, who bounces a bit, but photographs excellently and has good camera presence. Paul Kelly is usually fine, in his rare appearances, and would be welcome in a part requiring some acting.

Quite artless and immensely amusing is a Porky animated cartoon about Injun Joe and his territory. Injun Joe was the Davy Crockett of his time and territory, besides being a vicious little gink who took ice cream from baby bears. Definitely good.

Gene and Kathleen Lockhart amble through a domestic comedy involving double-dealing by Gene and double-talk by Kathleen. Bob Crosby adenoids through a musical short which is poorly staged and quite anemic.

The newsreel has scanty shots of Cardenas at San Luis Potosi, Cedillo, and Cedillo's army.

Locations.

Approximately half of "The Texans," featuring Joan Bennett and Randolph Scott, with May Robson and Walter Brennan, was filmed "on location," the longest trip being to the Texas ranch country between San Antonio and Laredo, where the company spent a month.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Ritz Bros. in 'Kentucky Moonshine' And Abe Lyman's Revue Capitol Hits

Screen and Stage Unite on Side of Lively Entertainment.

"KENTUCKY MOONSHINE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original story by M. M. Musselman and Jack Lait, jr., adapted to the screen by Art Arthur and Mr. Musselman, starring the Ritz Brothers, with Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville, John Carradine, Wally Vernon, Berton Churchill, Eddie Collins, Cecil Cunningham, Paul Stanton, Mary Treen, Francis Ford, the Brian Sisters, Claude Allister, Frank McGlynn, jr., Si Jenks, Irving Bacon, and Olin Howland. Directed by David Butler. Previewed Tuesday, May 24. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

In "Kentucky Moonshine" these goofy galley slaves of comedy not only work like Trojans, but they do rather better with a sustained plot—not too substantial a one, but still a plot—than was to have been anticipated on the basis of their work in earlier pictures where their contributions have been limited almost exclusively to interpolated specialties.

BELL.

"Kentucky Moonshine," of course, is sheer nonsense. It is, however, nonsense that has been skillfully contrived to offer a decided variation from the usual yarn of the radio aspirants who cannot manage an appearance before the mike in a big New York broadcasting studio featuring a sponsored program dedicated to soap. This program is beginning to crumble and "J. B.," its wealthy sponsor, insists that his program manager, singer and master of ceremonies scurry around and dig up something that will click with the Nation's listener-inners. This bright young man sells the boss the idea of a jaunt to the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky to unearth some genuine hillbilly talent in its wild state.

The three futile young "hams" who couldn't get a look-in at the studio get wind of the junket and with Caroline, a young vocalist who hasn't been able to get to first base either, beat the talent scouts to the hills and are the hillbilliest hillbillies you ever have seen when they arrive.

Finally Prove a Panic.

The first broadcast of the new program is from the Kentucky mountain settlement and is a colossal flop, owing to wire trouble, static, electrical interference and whatnot. No whit discouraged, Jerry Wade is sure he "has something there," and takes the "mountaineers" back to New York, where they really run into trouble. But when, after many high-voltage vicissitudes, they finally do get on the air, they are a panic.

This highly absurd charade is 90 per cent Ritz Brothers. As I have said, they give the picture everything they have—and they have plenty, as it turns out. Their scenes, as always, are heavily loaded with "gags" and a great deal of the time they overplay to the point of grotesquery and "mug" to a fare-thee-well, but scattered through the ridiculous proceedings are many flashes of comedy that are authentic and hilariously funny. The feuding between the Slack family—that would be the Ritz Brothers and Marjorie Weaver—and the Hatfields, led by Slim Summerville, John Carradine, Mary Treen, Francis Ford and Frank McGlynn, jr., is warfare at its most bizarre. The broadcasting scenes are scarcely less on the side of complete insanity.

At that final studio triumph, though, the three Ritzes, Al, Harry and Jimmy, reveal a fine capacity for legitimate burlesque. Their travesty of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is by way of being a comic gem, and their clothespin-on-the-nose impersonation of Rudy Vallee is not so bad, either.

The romantic trend of the story—and it has one—is intrusted judiciously to Tony Martin and Marjorie Weaver, who sing some tuneful sentimental songs to balance the crazier vocalisms of the stars. Best among the musical numbers are "Moonshine, Over Kentucky," "Reuben, Reuben, I've Been Swingin'," and "Sing a Song of Harvest."

The picture has not been skimped in production values and altogether marks an auspicious stellar debut for three of the theater's foremost masters of eccentric tomfoolery.

Lyman Revue Is a Hit.

It is an elaborate and diversified revue that Abe Lyman brings to the Capitol stage this week to augment the gayety of the screen feature. He is the only conductor of whom I am aware who subordinates his orchestra to the performances of his long list of specialists. There are only three band numbers on the Lyman program, the best being an especially effective instrumental arrangement of "Melancholy Baby," with a glee interlude that is beautiful and beautifully sung.

The orchestral numbers merely intersperse a long succession of specialty artists, beginning with the California Varsity Eight, a double male quartet that almost "stopped the show," with their medleys of melodies from "Naughty Marietta" and college songs. Dorothy Arden, an exceptional acrobatic and control dancer, came next and was in turn followed by Rose Blane, the orchestra's mezzo vocalist, who also scored a hit with "It's the Gypsy in My Soul" and "Joseph, Joseph."

The next star of the bill was Nick Long, jr., who proved, as he has done in so many pictures, that he is among the foremost of the stage's tap dancers. He was assisted by Danny Kaye, a dialect comedian who is really comic. Eddie Holly, barytone, rang up another personal hit with "Please Be Kind," "Josephine" and "Love" and then that droll gymnast, Walter Dare Wahl, aided by a new partner, went through his familiar but always amazing routine of serio-comic acrobatic tricks.

The Fox Movietone News supplements a bill that is recommended to all who like their entertainment well over on the lighter side.

popular orchestra conductor, who brings his "Californians" and a long list of specialists to town this week to furnish the living entertainment on the new bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. In diversity and skillful performance, the Lyman revue is one of the most entertaining that has played Washington in recent months.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., May 27.—Host Edward Everett Horton, famous for his unusual parties at his happy hacienda, Belligh Acres (pronounced as spelled)—named for the last Irish king—gave one of the nicest parties of the year.

We were invited for corned beef, cabbage and champagne. But his cook went berserk and gave us turkey pie, all the trimmings, corned beef, with fresh creamed horseradish. And a dessert looking like the puffed quilted sleeve of Maid Marion's wedding gown—but tasted better.

HEDDA HOPPER

I'm surprised anew, each time I'm with them, at the simplicity of Burns and Allen, Jack Benny and Mary Livingston and Lum and Abner. Gracie, pleased as Punch—who wouldn't be—at her new ring matching her gold bracelet, which took first prize at the Paris Exposition last year. The ring is like a bowl, a large diamond in the center, surrounded by smaller ones held in place by oval rim of gold.

Gracie's hobby is collecting bottles. Mary, who gets everything Gracie has, decided her hobby was star sapphires. I'll be darned if she hasn't one set in the lid of her cigarette case, with all kinds of jeweled gadgets surrounding it.

Gracie said it was a real privilege, and she learned so much, playing with Eddie in their last picture, "College Swing."

And Jack Benny's biggest thrill was doing a play which failed after five weeks, but was written for him—without song or dance—by George Kaufman.

"Imagine George Kaufman writing a play for me," said Jack.

We roared at the imitations and musical sounds made by that blind genius, Alec Templeton, who improvised on the piano his portrait of Gracie. When he finished she said, "Mercy!—do I talk that much?" "I know now what's the matter with my piano playing—can see," said George Burns.

Found out that Alec can lean from records the most difficult concertos in three or four hours. He's played concerts at Carnegie Hall, New York; Albert Hall, London—and we can hear him at "the Grove."

Following that, we had Ted Lewis and his four cowboys. Ted has a personality very like Buddy Ebsen, without the curly hair. The house came down when he rode and played his bucking musical instrument, which he called "Razzle Ma Dazzle Fudge. Froh Futt." Ending with clang of street car and shot from a .45.

Eddie Horton is taking his mother and two more members of his family on a tour of Scotland, Ireland and England in July, while he does a picture. This will be his mother's third trip since her seventieth birthday. Please give us more Eddie Hortons.

A good time was had by all at the farwell party given for Darryl Zanucks at the Troc. What a boon for the trades people! The public would have paid admission to see that fashion show.

Liz Whitney, tall and regal in beige tulle, aglow with jewels. Mary Pickford in white. Norma Shearer, virginal white, her only ornament a beautiful chain and tiny cuss. Merle Oberon was in a gown ten years too old for her. Front, black velvet and back, white organza. Norma and Merle with Jimmy Stewart and young Doug looked like a quartet—without song.

Columbia

Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy are back on F street for their fourth downtown week in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wead's story of "Test Pilot."

One of the best pictures of its kind ever made, "Test Pilot" gets away from the usual aviation plot, involving flying services already in commission, and devotes itself to the high-tension lives of the intrepid young men who take new ships into the air to prove their speed, stability and all-around suitability for the uses for which they have been designed. In addition to the excitement of the flying scenes, the film embodies a tremendous emotional tug, occasioned by the nerve-wracking anxiety of those near and dear to the fliers who remain on the ground and watch.

The development of the drama is thickly interlarded with comedy and is intense, also, in its visualization of the mental stresses through which the aviators pass while engaged in their hazardous work. These nervous stresses place as great a strain upon the man at the controls as he puts upon the plane he is trying out.

It already has been stated here time and time again that Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy are well-nigh perfectly cast in the title role, as the young wife who suffers untold agonies of mind and heart, and the "grease monkey," respectively. Other fine performances are contributed by Lionel Barrymore, as the sympathetic airplane manufacturer, and Samuel S. Hinds.

As an auxiliary feature of the bill, there is shown a new and characteristically thrilling installment of "The Lone Ranger," the chapter play that always leaves an audience on the edge of its collective chair wondering what will happen next.

Other short-reel subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day" complete a bill that averages a dozen hair-raising incidents to the square inch.

Trans-Lux

There is everything in the news this week at the Trans-Lux Theter from the last word in war pictres in China to a thrilling revol in Mexico and a cattle show in Australia.

Other interesting events in the week's news include Stalin reviewing the May Day parade in Moscow, Amy Johnson training women air reserves in England and shot of the terrific airplane tragedy in Ohio.

Royalty in the news gather together Emperor Hirohito of Japan, to receive his salute on his birthday; the Duke of Kent visting "King's School" and King Farouk viewing extensive air maneuvers. The North countries are not to be outdone as King Christian of Denmark opens a new bridge with royal ceremony.

In the realm of sports there is everything from the reason why Seabiscuit will not run to tennis stars and the last roundup in Oregon.

Lew Lehr gives us plenty of laughs as he describes the California beauties doing a bit of face painting. There are more sports, including softball, boxing and lifeboat races.

The short subjects give us an interesting pictorial and a beautiful travelog, in color, of the jungles of South America, showing animals and birds of all descriptions. There is also a "Stranger than Fiction" novelty and a clever color cartoon, "Cock of the Walk."

"Calvin," the remarkable numerologist, is still at the Trans-Lux and it is great fun finding your lucky number, days of the week, color and what have you.

All in all a fine bill of goods.

Film Debut.

"THE ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO." Samuel Goldwyn's picturization for United Artists of the story by N. A. Pogson, adapted to the screen by Robert E. Sherwood, starring Gary Cooper, with Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, George Barbier, Binnie Barnes, Ernest Truex, Alan Hale, H. B. Warner, Robert Grieg, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Henry Kolker, Hale Hamilton, Stanley Fields, Harold Huber and Lana Turner. Directed by Archie Mayo. Reviewed second week, by Mary Harris. At Loew's Palace.

In "Marco Polo" audiences will find every element of danger, spectacle and intrigue calculated to keep them perched on the edge of their seats and practically a-twitter.

Young Marco Polo, snatched from his Venetian dalliances with dames and dice by his father's demand that he survey a trade route to far Cathay, goes through perils that make a trip to the South Pole seem like a junket in Rock Creek Park. Shipwrecked in the Mediterranean, trapped in a desert sandstorm, freezing in the snow-swept passes of unknown mountains,—ah, Marco Polo can take it all standing on his ear.

But finally he reaches the fertile plains of Cathay, the golden towers of Peking and the court of Kublai Khan who turns out to be our jovial friend, George Barbier, bedecked with long moustaches. But does Marco Polo busy himself negotiating trdae agreements? Not a bit of it. He is to busy falling in love with the great Khan's daughter, Sigrid Gurie.

Story is Altered.

The movie makers have taken considerable liberties with history which, we believe, records Marco Polo as a middle-aged and very able liar of the Middle Ages. But there's no glamour about that and the real Marco Polo should rise from his sepulchre and thank Hollywood for investing him with such a gorgeous legend.

Gary Cooper makes a smooth and forthright job of his Marco Polo. But almost as effective in a different way is Ernest Truex as the weary-footed and fearful little companion of the great Marco. Basil Rathbone is again our own ultra-viperish Basil, as Ahmed, an Arabian wanderer who has become chief minister of the Kublai Khan. Alan Hale doesn't look much like a Tatar chieftain, but he makes up for it by his sound acting. One of the very best characterizations of the picture, both in appearance and acting, is that of Harold Huber, assassin-spy in the employ of Ahmed.

Sigrid Gurie is sweet and naive as the princess of Peking and Binnie Barnes is sweet and sirenish as a Tatar lady.

There is a great sweep of spectacle in the picture—recklessly-riding Tatar hordes, Chinese soldiery marching to wild music and the attack on walled Peking.

A Few Anachronisms.

But while "Marco Polo" is a great and shining achievement we wish that a few things might have been done differently: That the girls of the Peking court had been Eurasians or pure Oriental types instead of the usual Hollywood "extras;" that real shaggy Manchurian ponies had been used for the riding sequences — Western ranch horses scratch the illusion; that the aged walls of Peking didn't look as though they had been built yesterday; and finally that the story and dialogue writers had soaked their heads in the late Donn Byrne's wonderful novel, "Marco Polo," and thus have, perhaps, avoided putting such phrases as "Don't mention it, girls," in Gary Cooper's mouth when he is speaking to beauties in the court of Cathay.

Pete Smith has a short about the art of modeling for clothes, up to his usual high standard of trifling. There is also an "Our Gang" comedy and the newsreel shows the christening of the tiny new Princess of the Netherlands.

Universal Keeps Andrea Leeds to Play Youth Role

Impressed with her work in "Letter of Introduction," Charles R. Rogers, in charge of production, has worked out a deal with Samuel Goldwyn, to whom Miss Leeds is under contract, for her to go into the top feminine role of "Youth Takes a Fling."

The latter picture will go before the cameras shortly after Miss Leeds has finished her current assignment, probably next month.

Joel McCrea, also borrowed from Goldwyn, will play opposite the actress in the male lead.

The picture will be directed by Archie Mayo and produced by Joe Pasternak, producer of the Deanna Durbin pictures. It will be a modern youth story with a New York locale. Miles Connolly is writing the screen play.

In "Letter of Introduction," Miss Leeds' current vehicle, other top roles are being played by Adolphe Menjou, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, and George Murphy.

Weaver-Singer.

Betty Jaynes, young singer, can weave artistic tapestries, but when she attempts to draw more than a circle, she is licked.

Everybody's Truckin'

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What Is Meant by "Social Background?" And, Lacking It, Must One Be Social Pariah, Woman Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is your interpretation of "social background?" I understand it to mean the good parentage of a person and the nice home he may have. If that is true, what about the person who may have a rather poor dwelling place and who may have one parent who is constantly causing sorrow and trouble for the rest of the family?

• • • •

I realize how a nice home can influence a person in social life; but then again, there is the person who can have no place to carry on social functions. Must he be excluded entirely from the social world? If not, how can he accomplish such a background, and where? Please answer my question in your column, of which I am a daily reader. Sincerely, DOROTHY.

• • • •

DEAR DOROTHY: It so happens that my interpretation of "social background" differs from yours, but that does not, of course, alter the nature of your problem. As I interpret the phrase, it has reference, in a general and inclusive way, to the factors of blood heritage, family tradition and circumstantial environment (from the time of birth) which contribute to the making of an individual; to those things outside the individual's control (in the beginning, at least) which conspired to give him either an advantageous or disadvantageous start in life. However, one's "social background," in a literal and specific sense, could mean the immediate backdrop of home, family and friends against which one leads one's life. Such a background could be either "excellent," or "unfortunate." The term, in my opinion, is neutral, conveying no image, if employed without a qualifying adjective.

• • • •

The person with a disadvantageous or unfortunate social background, either remote or immediate, is not necessarily permanently frustrated in the matter of advancing himself to a happier and more admirable niche in life. One of the first principles of our democracy is the tenet that every adult has opportunity for obtaining recognition of special, personal merit. No one is bound by caste or tradition to stick to the family pattern. Every man is free to make the most and best of his life, according to his vision and ability. By virtue of his birth into a democratic social system a man is entitled to regard the world about him as his "oyster," and to make of it what he can and will. (The same, of course, applies to women.)

• • • •

For the person just coming of age, who appears to be hopelessly handicapped by residence with a shiftless, slovenly family group, possessing no socially acceptable standards of appearance, behavior and achievement, the only escape to better things is to launch out on his own, and to become self supporting at some geographical point as far distant from his family as possible, where he can externalize his own standards and live by them.

• • • •

For the person whose disadvantage consists solely of poverty, in the sense of lack of means to provide a beautifully furnished home in a so-called "good neighborhood" (further complicated by the presence of a drunken, disorderly or irresponsible parent) it might be cowardice and false pride to run away. His character might develop to its greatest stature by fighting his way to eventual success and recognition with his foot on home base, so to speak.

• • • •

It is a mark of underbreeding to be ashamed of, or to feel called upon to apologize for, "a rather poor dwelling place," just as it is to discuss, or to attempt to explain away, or to speak reproachfully of, an irresponsible parent's embarrassing behavior. (In one's casual social interchange, I mean; naturally one might dismiss such domestic concerns with the immediate members of one's family.) If the youth from such a background shows real potentialities, of a social and professional kind, and through his endeavors comes in contact with discerning persons of superior caliber who appreciate his intrinsic qualities, they will not reject him because of his background, no matter how opulent and advantageous their own background may be.

• • • •

If my remarks seem abstract and not particularly applicable to your case, that is because your questions are posed in a form so veiled and vague that no other approach is possible. However, if you are young, lonely, wanting friends, yet lacking the set-up for entertaining acquaintances at home and converting them into friends—you have a choice of two things to do. Either you must become self supporting and go elsewhere to live, where you can entertain without embarrassment and without feeling the need for apology, or where you can explain, candidly, to new acquaintances that entertaining is out of the question in your limited quarters. Or, as an alternative, you will have to work out your problem with the help of your pastor, Sunday school teacher, or the secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., one of whom should be able to suggest other ways and places for meeting and making friends. M. H.

Process, Found By Accident, Is Luring Experts

Conservative D. C. Barbers Going to Parkers Landing to Learn Feat.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT'S the "wave of a lifetime," which is sweeping the country and relegating all other topics of conversation into the background. It happened when a barber named Kenneth Christy, of Parkers Landing, Pa., in trying to cut a football player's hair so a scalp wound wouldn't show, came upon the process by accident.

All of Christy's friends went to him for a similar cut and now, ten years later, hairdressers from all over the country are flocking to this small town to learn the method, which has been patented. After viewing the pros and cons of the "cut-in-wave," conservative Washington hair experts are going to Parkers Landing and learning how the feat is performed.

Consensus Is Given.

All hair will not adapt itself to this treatment. Hair that is too curly, dry or course will not "take" to a Christy cut. A permanent must be at least six months old before the "cut-in" wave can be given.

The process produces waves, not curls; ends must be taken care of by a permanent wave.

After the wave-cutting it is imperative that you go to the same operator for at least three months for "push-ups" to set the wave; after that it is supposed to be adaptable to home treatment.

When the hair grows out it will be wavy, and another cut it not supposed to be necessary for the rest of your life; waves grow deeper as time goes on.

If you are the type of person who goes in for high-styled coiffures, this wave-cutting system is probably not for you; it may not be flattering.

Method Is Described.

For straight-haired women who crave wavy hair, this is the way licensed Christy operators cut the waves:

The hair is dampened with water (not shampooed), and then pushed up to locate the natural trend of growth. After this process, which takes quite a long time, the cutting begins, first with a scissors and then with a razor. The hair is cut into grooves, combed back and separated into numerous parts, and cut again with scissors along the parts. It is combed and waved with the fingers into loose, head-molding and natural-looking waves. A session under the dryer and a final patting by the operator—and you emerge a different personality.

Women are not the only ones going in for this "lifetime wave from a hair cut," for, according to statistics, a large percentage of those taking it are men (of all ages), and quite a number of children. More than 50 stores and beauty salons throughout the country have licensed Christy operators and all are doing a record business. Hollywood is next, it is reported, to accept this wave-cut revolution. Christy and his first client—Joe Logue, the football player—are said to be on their way now to the cinema city.

1938 June Bride May Be Simple or Sophisticated Type

Paris (U.P.).—June brides this spring can run the gamut from the most picturesque old-fashioned quaintness to the most modern sophistication in planning her wedding.

If she goes to Molyneux she will probably come out with a "Winter-halter" wedding; bridesmaids to precede her in the now famous (but still unpurchased) crinoline wedding dress, in slipper satin wide skirted models.

The Lanvin collection is full of bridesmaid ideas; ranging from the exotic Egyptian with draped gowns and flowing headdresses (this would be effective in shades of orange with the attendants carrying sheafs of tiger lilies) to romantic organdies and Degas dancing dresses.

A white embroidered organdy skirt emerges from a gathered blue bodice from which organdy winged sleeves sprout for another effective bridesmaid idea. With this, bands of the same blue are wound about the piled-high coiffure and topped with a bunch of pastel flowers. The same flowers in an organdy frill should complete a most charming bridesmaid picture.

A Goya-esque wedding would be in step with the times—the bridesmaids in lace and organdy combinations of navy blue and pink with ruffled organdy scarves draped over head and shoulders. Lace fans should be carried with these costumes.

Men's Tab-Collar Shirts Give Way to New Types

New York (AP).—Orthodox tab-collar shirts for men with the cross-over fasteners, are being supplanted by adaptations of the conventional collar that have the neat appearance and wearability of tabs.

Sport trousers with matching cloth belts attached promise wide popularity this spring and summer. Conventional belt pants will have the belt loops set an inch or so down, due to this curious evolution: the popularity of suspenders led to high-rise trousers with waistline extensions; in the summer, men started wearing those loopless trousers with belts wrapped haphazardly around them a couple of inches below the waist line; the pants were found to set so well that they're arranging to keep an inch or so of pants above the belt all the time now.

Organza 'Shawls.'

Paris (U.P.).—A pleasing variety of the evening "shawl" is the shoulder cape which may be made of organza, silk mousseline, tulle or lace. A myriad of tiny white Valenciennes race ruffles form the shoulder cape for a white organza dress whose skirt is made of ruffled lace panels. Two 8-inch flounces of black silk mousilline form the shoulder cape for a dress of the same material, whose fluffy skirt is formed by rows of circular flounces graduated in depth.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 27.

SH! WE TOTTER happily on the very brink of the Great Bride Rush of '38! The blushing groom has been duly injected with Builder-Upper and the fiancee has her veil, gown and gloves all set for the call to arms. Now for the final touch — a few wise words of good cheer from the boss of a Brides' Shop here. Handy Hints for the Incipient Wife, we can call it.

ALICE HUGHES

"Just before you start the hike to the altar," says this expert, "bite down with both lips on a piece of cleansing tissue to remove excess lipstick. Rub on a dab of cold cream. This will set the color and keep you from smearing the groom when he gets the nuptial kiss." A right smart tip.

The lady also warns the girls not to leave off rouge for the ceremony, as the sufferers are usually too pale, anyway, and she also cries out against the nervous fit of nose-powdering just before the ceremony, which usually makes the bride look as though she had just been hauled from a flour barrel.

Another bright thought is a pearly nail finish for the rites instead of red—which distracts the audience's attention from the joyous face and also photographs black in the wedding picture. A warm shade of powder goes much the best with a white wedding gown.

All these little hints may seem minor, but tot them all up and they spell a prettier and more self-assured bride. All right—now let the organist plunge into his "Lohengrin." The panic is on!

• • • •

Still another avers that Mary Ann Travers, of the better set, is the Charm Bracelet Champion of Greater New York, with 58 dingle-dangles hanging from her wrist, or throat, for it works better as a necklace. Have you any girls for the national title? Count up their doo-d ds and send 'em in—with an affidavit, though, of course, we believe you, duckies!

Name of the week—shucks, any week. Bpupesh Guha, exotic dancer now giving recitals here.

One of New York's most famous department stores has given local pessimists a shot in the arm by announcing that they will soon spend a million to install escalators and add floor space. "Huzzah," feebly pipe our chronic weepers.

Leave it to Natalie Merrill for a new and terrifying note for a cocktail party to open her penthouse, 18 flights up! After the guests had inhaled a few snorts, what should appear but a bag-piper in kilts, tootling Scottish laments on his howler! This went on for some time! Of course, he walked up and down and was hard to hit, as the old joke says. But my old gentleman says frankly that he would have jumped right off the porch without a parachute! Pipes, indeed!

The current rage for making something out of nothing (for publicity) has finally hit Mrs. Jimmy Walker's fancy flower shop. The other day I found some "newspaper names" making corsages out of beets, radishes and scallions. Boutonieres from potatoes, even. What won't these dear people think up?

This column appears daily and Sunday.

Pockets Are Sewn On Pajama Knees

Paris (U.P.).—Patch pockets are slipping lower and lower. In the first summer showings they had slipped so far that they were planted on the "tummy" of a Molyneux beach play suit. And now in order to have your pocket in the smartest position you must sew it on the right knee of your beach pajamas.

Vera Borea is the originator of the amusing idea. She usese it with special dash on some blue crash beach trousers which look for all the world like overalls. The pocket looks like nothing more aristocratic than a big patch on the knee. Out of it sprout a gay orange cotton handkerchief; and failing half-way to the pocketed knees is a "sloppy" Normandy peasant blouse made of the same blue crash. The blouse—really a smock variation—may be used separately to slip over a bathing suit before and after the plunge.

A. & P. FOOD STORES

Fish Is Not Brain Food.

Once a week in this column will be printed a discussion of a medical superstition. Readers are invited to contribute.

That fish is a brain food.

It may seem silly to lay any stress on this particular superstition, but it has been estimated that 50 per cent of the general population and 32 per cent of school teachers believe that eating fish improves the brain. These figures were obtained through a questionnaire sent out by Dr. A. O. Bowden, president of the New Mexico State Teachers' College, and distributed among parents and teachers of elementary school pupils in cities in 14 States scattered from New Hampshire to California.

Unlike a great many medical superstitions, we are able to trace this one to its source. It is of comparatively recent origin and is an illustration of Pope's adage that "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing."

During the nineteenth century biological chemistry made great strides and people were able to analyze the chemical structure, not only of organs, but of food substances. It was found that the brain contained a considerable amount of phosphorous. Of course, it contains other substances, too, but it is very high in phosphorus. The eminent German philosophical writer, Buchner, was led to make an epigram as a result of these researches, which was "Without phosphorus there is no thought."

At about the same time research into the structure of fish flesh resulted in the finding that fish were particularly rich in phosphorus. This was announced by the French chemist, Dumas, a teacher of the great Pasteur. With this knowledge at hand and mindful of Buchner's epigram, Louis Agassiz, professor of natural history at Harvard, argued that the eating of fish would be good for the brain.

Of course the brain is developed by any kind of food and will pick up what phosphorus it needs from practically any diet. During the time that the brain grows the most rapidly, that is up to the age of 6 years, the individual lives very largely on milk, and certainly has very little fish in the diet.

It would be just as sensible to say that fish is a good food to keep you awake because fish never sleep. As a matter of fact, they probably do sleep, but their sleep is the most primitive form among vertebrates. It simply consists in being perfectly still. They do not close their eyes because they can't, and unlike human beings' sleep, their senses are probably alert. But complete loss of motion in a fish is considered by psychologists to be a form of sleep.

Pink Is in the Pink.

A smart note in decoration this summer are the pink tones in window curtains, draperies and slip-covers. Some so light that most women will think of them as a newly pretty beige tone. Some so deep that they are really deep rose or apricot. They give rooms that much desired cool look and everyone can have a lot of fun combining them with refreshing harmonizing colors in the room scheme.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IN THE MIDST of a Times Square subway rush an old news vendor—she must have been 70—took time out from business to primp before a chewing gum mirror. She adjusted her hat to a more becoming angle, tucked a stray lock into place, powdered her nose, and went on with a lighter step to peddle her papers.

That incident typifies the eternal feminine in a man's world. Regardless of age or position, a woman always wants to look her best . . . And the elderly street peddler and the brisk business executive are sisters under the skin.

Paradoxically, the more recognition a woman wins for efficiency, the more she appreciates the description "lovely." Pride may keep you from an open admission, but business is a hard game for a woman. If you are to be a success, you have precious little time for anything else. The specific problem in your case is to manage time for relaxation to cancel the aging effects of work under pressure, and to engage in sufficient exercise to keep your figure.

Relaxation Essential.

We have come to realize that relaxation is one of the most essential factors in beauty. This is particularly true for the business woman. But if you can only manage 30 minutes a day in which to relax completely, mentally and physically, you can take a longer lease on youth. Some authorities on relaxation claim that such a program will add 15 years to the prime of a woman's life.

Try to plan to relax sometimes between 5 and 6 o'clock every day. Lie down in a quiet room with the shades drawn and let mind and muscles go limp. Warm compresses on the eyes help. When you have been on your feet most of the day, place the pillows under your feet instead of your head. For the first week or so you may not succeed in relaxing by the clock. You will have to train yourself to relax completely, but by the end of the second week you will begin to see how important such a routine is to your well-being.

Put Rest Period Aside.

You probably have little time for exercise, but somehow or other you must put aside from 10 to 15 minutes each day for the program that will keep you fit and trim. Exercises best for you are those which use the trunk muscles, such as stretching, and those which use the hip muscles, as in high backward kicking. When you are tired from mental work, physical exercise itself is relaxation and will not only keep you in condition but will banish the bugaboo of insomnia which haunts the business woman.

Even 10 or 15 Minutes a Day Will Help to Keep You Fit and Trim.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The New Member.

PRESIDENT—We will now vote on the proposed new members. The first is Miss Angie Jinks. Any remarks?

MISS SNIFF—Just who IS Miss Jinks, may I inquire?

MISS CHUMLEY—I proposed the name of Miss Jinks, and I want to say she is a very lovely girl. And besides, she has all the professional qualifications.

MISS BUBBLE—I move Miss Jinks be made a member.

MISS CHEESIT—Just a minute! Is she that girl who is sort of—well, stout, and who wears that funny plaid coat?

MISS DART—Yes, and that—that hat.

MISS CHUMLEY—I can't see that what she wears has anything to do with it. This is not a social club.

MISS CHIPP—Yes, as far as I'm concerned, I'm no fashion plate myself.

MISS CHIP—Why, I have not!

MISS FLYTIE—Well, I know I haven't had a new dress since——

PRESIDENT—Girls! Girls! Please keep to the subject.

MISS SNIFF—Madame President, it's not a question of how Miss Jinks dresses. The whole point is, we ought to be very careful about getting the right types of girls into our club.

MISS CHUMLEY—Well, Miss Jinks comes from very lovely people——

MISS HACK—What I want to know is—will she come to meetings? There's too much dead wood in this club already.

MISS CHIPP—Madame President, if she's hitting at me. I just want to say I was sick the last meeting.

MISS CLYMER—Well, I don't think I'm deadwood, and I don't always——

PRESIDENT—Are there any more remarks about Miss Jinks?

MISS GOODE—I'd like to ask one question. Is it true that Miss Jinks has been married and divorced?

MISS FLYTIE—I can't see what that's got to do with it.

MISS GOODE—I was just asking for information.

MISS CLYMER—Well, I'm not interested in that. I always say a person's personal life is their personal life. But I think we ought to go slow in taking in too many members.

MISS CHEESIT—We ought to be careful we don't get anybody who's a trouble maker.

MISS CHUMLEY—Well, Miss Jinks isn't that kind of a girl. I will admit that she dresses—well, what I mean is she wears unusual clothes. But that's her own business. And I will says she has some very good contacts.

MISS HACK—Well, what I want to know is—is she the type that'll pay her dues? I have enough trouble as treasurer——

MISS CHIPP—Say, if you're hitting at me, I paid my dues last week.

MISS BUBBLE—Oh, say; that reminds me; I haven't paid mine!

MISS CHEESIT—I haven't either! Here, I'll make you a check right now.

MISS SNIFF—Say, have you got change for a $5 bill?

MISS DART—Do I owe for last year, too?

PRESIDENT—Girls! Girls! Please! Is there a second to the motion to accept Miss Jinks?

MISS DART—Wait a minute! I can't figure out who this Miss Jinks is. I wonder if she's that girl who rides downtown with me every morning . . . in the plaid coat?

MISS CHEESIT—Yes, and the —— hat.

MISS DART—Madame President, I want to say I'm as broadminded as anybody, but I don't think we ought to act too quickly on important things. I move we put Miss Jinks on the table.

MISS SNIFF—Madame President, I amend the motion to table by suggesting that in the meantime Miss Chumley or some of Miss Jinks' friends get it over to her—in a nice way, of course—that she dress a little differently——

MISS CHEESIT—Yes, she ought to do something about her hats——

MISS DART—I won't mind her hats so much. She's simply not the type to wear plaids——

PRESIDENT—Girls! Girls! Girls! You have heard the amended motion to table Miss Jinks. All in favor say "Aye."

CONNECTICUT AVE. AT CALVERT

Marquis James, Wife Will Visit the Hurjas

Dinner in Honor of Famous Writer Set for Saturday; Many Friends Recall His Newspaper Career in the National Capital.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

In Washington next week for a brief visit with Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja will come Marquis James, Pulitzer prize winning author, and his wife, Bessie Rowland James, who also has several books to her credit.

They are expected to arrive Saturday. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Hurja will give a small dinner in honor of their guests, and the following afternoon they will entertain at cocktails and tea a much larger group, who have been invited to meet the famous writer and his wife.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The coming visit will be the first Mr. James has made to Washington since he was named co-winner with Odell Shephard of this year's Pulitzer prize for the most distinguished American biography. Mr. Shephard won his part of the award on "Pedlar's Progress, the Life of Bronson Olcott." Mr. James won his on the two-volume biography of Andrew Jackson, some of which was written in Washington.

Mr. James is widely known here. On his frequent trips to the Capital to do research at the Library of Congress and to gather material elsewhere for his Jackson books, he frequently managed to find some free time to renew old acquaintanceships and to make new ones. He has many friends here who knew him back in the years when he was an itinerant newspaperman, or during other stages of his varied and colorful career.

Friendship Stemmed From Jackson Interest

His friendship with Mr. Hurja stemmed from their common interest in Andrew Jackson. For years one of Mr. Hurja's hobbies has been the collection of original Jackson letters and papers. Marquis James became interested in Jackson when he was writing "The Raven," a biography of Sam Houston. This book, on which Mr. James won his first Pulitzer prize, was no sooner finished than he began collecting data on the man he considers "America's most colorful President."

A couple of years ago I interviewed Mr. James when he was working on his second volume of the Jackson biography. He told me he had gone through more than 20,000 letters and 60,000 books searching for material. He said he doubted modern America would ever give rise to a man as colorful as Jackson.

Mrs. James, a newspaper women before her marriage, has written several books for children, including one based on material in "The Raven." For a number of years she has been collecting data on Anne Royall, pioneer journalist, with the hope she may eventually write a biography of her.

Refuses to Become "A Public Figure"

A few months ago, Mr. James, who has done all types of writing, from "ghosting" to turning out dime novels for the pulp magazines, wrote an article on Secretary of State Cordell Hull, which appeared in a nationally-known magazine. Since then he has combined article writing with further research in connection with a revised edition of one of his biographies. A loosely-hung-together man with sandy hair, massive features and a characteristic drawl that reveals his Missouri-Oklahoma origin, Marquis James has consistently refused to be lionized as a famous author.

He dislikes going to literary teas and in most cases refuses to talk before groups. As he puts it: "Just because I've written a couple of best-sellers is no reason to become a public figure in any respect. I don't want to help put on the show myself. I'd rather sit back and see what it looks like from a 50-cent seat. You can't possibly appraise other public figures if you try to stay on the stage yourself."

Mr. and Mrs. James make their home in Pleasantville, N. Y.

Lindsays Plan Garden Parties

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay have issued invitations to a garden party June 9, from 4 to 7 o'clock, at the British Embassy. The event will celebrate the birthday of His Majesty, King George VI, whose actual birthday is in December. "Weather permitting," is the closing line on the invitations.

A smaller group of guests has been invited to another garden party at the British Embassy. It is scheduled for June 4.

Francis Keyes, Wife Congratulated on The Birth of a Son

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Keyes, of Boston, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son yesterday The mother is the former Miss Louise McNeil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McNeil, of Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Mr. Keyes is the son of former Senator and Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, of North Haverhill, N. H., and Washington. The latter, who is widely known as Frances Parkinson Keyes, author, is now in Los Angeles, where she will visit briefly before leaving for Denver, Colo., where she will attend the wedding Thursday of her eldest son, Henry Wilder Keyes, jr., and Miss Betty Louise Main, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Main.

Wife of Envoy Will Sail Soon

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, and her children will sail next Saturday to spend the summer in Norway. The Minister is expected to embark June 18 to join them.

Yesterday Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne was guest of honor at a luncheon given at the Shoreham by Mrs. Royal Copeland. In the party were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Carlos de Mar and Mrs. Elonzo Tyner.

Tonight, Senator and Mrs. Copeland will entertain at the Shoreham in honor of the Superintendent of the Military Academy and Mrs. William D. Connor.

Mrs. Connor was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Army Chief of Staff, at the Chevy Chase Club.

Of interest to their friends in Washington is the wedding of Miss Anne Radford Trott and Dr. William Garland Talmage, which took place at noon yesterday at Staunton, Va. The ceremony was performed at Trinity Episcopal Church with the rector, the Rev. John J. Gravatt, D.D., officiating.

Miss Trott is the daughter of Mrs. Sydney Burnett Trott of Staunton and the late Mr. Trott, while Dr. Talmage is the son of Mrs. William Walter Talmage of Petersburg, Va. and the late Mr. Talmage.

Brother Gives Bride in Marriage

Given in marriage by her brother, Sydney Edwards Trott, the bride wore a gown of charmspun lace in princess style, terminating in a train. The illusion veil had been worn by her grandmother at the latter's wedding in 1862. Her shower bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Sydney Edwards Trott served as her sister-in-law's matron of honor and only attendant. Mrs. Trott wore a peach marquisette and lace gown fashioned in bouffant style. Her matching picture hat was of horsehair braid, tied with hyacinth blue ribbon, and her flowers were a shower bouquet of pansies.

Walter Raymond Talmage, of the University of Alabama, was his brother's best man and ushers were William Barksdale Attkinson and Robert A. Talmage, of Petersburg, Va.; Rudolf von Erichsen, of New York City, and Charles Louis Petze, jr., of Wilmington, Del.

Reception Follows Wedding Ceremony

Following a reception at the home of Mrs. M. W. Mercereau, the couple left for a wedding trip of several weeks. They will make their home at Succasunna, N. J. The bride's traveling costume was a tailored dress of navy blue crepe with navy blue accessories.

The former Miss Trott attended Ursuline Academy at Wilmington, Del., and is a graduate of Mary Baldwin Seminary of Staunton and of Madison College, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dr. Talmage was graduated from William and Mary College and the Medical College of Virginia. He now is the attending physician at Dover General Hospital, Dover, N. J., and is a member of the staffs of the New York Post-Graduate Hospital and Manhattan General Hospital in New York City.

Among guests from out of town were Mrs. Malcolm A. Holliday and her daughter, Miss Jean Holliday, of Washington.

Miss Nusbaum Becomes Bride

Miss Ruth Eleanor Nusbaum yesterday became the bride of William Thomas McClelland, of Macon, Ga., in a ceremony conducted at the Silver Spring Baptist Church by the Rev. J. Wesley Loftis. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Agnes M. Nusbaum, of Takoma Park, Md., and the late George W. Nusbaum.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a dress of pale pink mousseline de soie, fashioned with short puffed sleeves, and a full skirt. Her hat of the same color was of lace and was tied under the chin with pink velvet ribbon. She carried pink roses and delphinium.

Miss Edith Mae Nusbaum, her sister, who was her only attendant, was in pale yellow mousseline de soie and had a band of yellow roses in her hair. She carried talisman roses. Hugh D. Glisson, of Portsmouth, Va., was best man. The ushers were John W. Babcock, of Washington, and Benjamin Stephens, of Takoma Park.

MRS. KARLTON WAYNE PIERCE, who before her marriage yesterday at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South, was Miss Valerie Virginia Vaught. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jordan Vaught, and will face another "big day" soon when she receives her college degree in the commencement exercises at George Washington University in June.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MRS. McCOOK KNOX'S new-old house in Georgetown, which she recently remodeled, is just what you would expect the home of anyone as artistic as she. For a number of years her name has been synonymous with art, from early American portraits, on which she has written a book, to modern paintings, in which she is so interested that she brought the first exhibition to Washington two years ago of the Museum of Modern Art.

DUDLEY HARMON.

• • • •

MOST exciting features of the house are three mantels, one in the drawing room, another in the library, and a third in Mrs. Knox's bedroom. One of these was found after it had been taken from a dismantled house in Virginia and placed against a tree on the lawn to be burned as rubbish. The others came from an equally old house in Newcastle, Del., and their delicate carving was hidden beneath several layers of unattractive paint, most of which Mrs. Knox scraped away herself. Two of the mantels extend all the way to the ceiling, and are so big they had to be taken apart to be gotten in the front door.

• • • •

THE walls of the drawing room and library are painted a soft green. An old screen and a footstool are covered with needlepoint which Mrs. Knox worked herself. The diningroom is in the basement, but has been made to look light and cheery by wall paper in a soft and lovely shade of yellow. On the walls are glass lights, shaped like a candle flame, in black iron leaf shaped holders. These Mrs. Knox designed herself.

• • • •

THE dining room opens out onto a small sheltered terrace, an ideal place for breakfasting, lunching or dining on a warm summer day. On a higher level than the terrace is the garden, which has a sweet little arbor now covered with vines in full bloom.

Mrs. Knox's many friends will be glad to know that she is feeling much better after the illness which has kept her home most of the spring. The past winter has been an exceptionally strenuous one, what with moving into her new house and working on the exhibit of portraits of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and their families which was held last November in the Corcoran Art Gallery as part of the United States Constitution sesquicentennial celebration.

ANOTHER household note: Countess van Rechteren Limpurg uses as finger bowls at her dinners the most beautiful round silver dishes, with engraved handles, which Dutchmen used 300 years ago to drink their brandy from. Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, whose husband is Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, will sail the end of June to spend the summer at their estate in Holland. It's a perfectly beautiful place, according to pictures, surrounded by a moat, but so large that the van Rechterens prefer to live in part of the stables which they recently remodeled.

• • • •

ODDS AND ENDS: Mrs. Chauncey Parker will leave early next month to spend the summer at her Bar Harbor home . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse have migrated to Vienna, Va., where they will be at their summer place, Wolf Trap Farm, until sailing for Europe in July . . . Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal have finally gone to Havana, after their departure was postponed for several weeks by the State Department.

Ambassador From Cuba Honor Guest at Supper

Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, Cuban Ambassador, was the guest of honor last night in a buffet supper given by Maj. Felipe Munilla, Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, and Senora de Munilla. Guests included members of the Cuban Embassy staff and their families.

General and Mrs. Craig To Entertain Visitors

The Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. Malin Craig will be joined Wednesday by Col. Orrin R. Wolfe, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Wolfe, of San Francisco, who will spend a week with them.

Miss Vaught Becomes Bride Of Mr. Pierce

G. W. U. Senior Married at Mount Vernon Place; Mr. Rustin Officiates.

Miss Valerie Virginia Vaught, who will be graduated in a few days from George Washington University, yesterday afternoon became the bride of Karlton Wayne Pierce. The wedding, attended by many friends and out-of-town guests, took place at 4 o'clock at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South. The Rev. John W. Rustin officiated.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jordan Vaught, of College Heights, Hyattsville, Md., wore white satin fashioned on princess lines. The collar was in Mary Queen of Scotland style, and the dress, with rosepoint insets terminated in a train. Her long veil was held by a cap of seed pearls and her flowers were calla lilies.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Miss Cecelia Jeannette Vaught served as her sister's maid of honor and was attired in pink mousseline de soie with pink accessories. She carried sweet peas and roses. Miss Janet Pierce, of Chevy Chase, the sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Beatrice Mansfield Cullison, of New York City, were the bridesmaids. They also wore pink mousseline de soie and had muff corsages of blue sweet peas and pink roses. Miss Vaught's other attendants were little Mary Ellen Houghland and young Daniel Cullison Vaught.

Mr. Pierce, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Pierce, of Chevy Chase, had William Jordan Vaught, jr., as his best man. The ushers were Clyde Balch and Russell Hudson Cullen, of Hyattsville, Md.; Charles Pruitt, of Frederick, Md., and Jule Harrah, of Baltimore, Md.

At the wedding reception which took place in the garden of the home of the bride's parents, the mother of the bride wore pink crepe with white accessories while the mother of the bridegroom was in blue lace with white accessories. Miss Mary Richards Hill and Miss Mary Jo Mitchell also assisted in receiving the guests.

Will Make Home In College Park

When the couple left on their wedding trip, Mrs. Karlton Wayne Pierce was wearing a dusty rose crepe suit with dubonnet accessories. They will make their home in College Park, Md. Mr. Pierce is a graduate of the University of Maryland and a member of Alpha Chi Sigma and Pi Delta Epsilon. The bride, who once attended Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Among the out-of-town guests was Mrs. James B. Cullison, of Enid, Okla., grandmother of the bride and widow of Justice Cullison of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma.

Roper Off Tonight To Address Class In New Orleans

Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, will leave tonight for New Orleans to give the commencement address at Loyola University exercises Monday.

Among the graduates will be Miss Mary Louise Roper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, jr., of New Orleans, and the first grandchild of the Secretary and Mrs. Roper to complete a college career.

Miss Brown Entertains Today for Bride-to-Be

Miss Kathleen Brown, who will be a bridesmaid at the wedding next Saturday of Miss Elizabeth Brooke to Lawrence James Simmons, will entertain at a luncheon today at the Shoreham in honor of the bride to be. Her guests will include Miss Dorothy Shutz, Mrs. Ben Dyer, Mrs. Burr N. Edwards, jr., Mrs. Robert H. Fuchs, Mrs. Charles Sebastian, jr., Miss Mary Dell, Mrs. James White, Mrs. Charles Bell, sister of the hostess, and Miss Elizabeth Webb, of Marion, Ala., who is visiting Miss Brown.

Congressional Group Holds Farewell Fete

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

A farewell luncheon, celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of the Congressional Club was held yesterday at the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue with six charter members present.

The party was one of the few given during the season which only club members attended. It closed the activities for the year and marked the rounding out of the two-year term served by Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, of New York, as president. Charter members present included Mrs. Ollie James, wife of the former Senator James, of Kentucky; Mrs. James R. Mann, of Illinois; Mrs. Finis Garrett, wife of Judge Garrett, former Representative from Tennessee and now a member of the United States Court of Custom and Patent Appeals; Mrs. Frank Mondell, of Wyoming; Mrs. Robert Love Taylor, of Tennessee, and Mrs. Ben Cranevs, of Arkansas.

With the approaching adjournment of Congress, the Congressional wives had left their busy preparations for departure to attend the luncheon. Much of the conversation was speculation as to what members would be returned to Washington by the fall elections. Many of the women have abandoned vacation plans and will take the stump for their husbands or at least tend the home fires while their husbands campaign.

No other woman's club in the Capital, with an established headquarters, ever has such a significant farewell party as does the Congressional Club. Its members scatter to all parts of the country with no assurance they will return another year.

The outgoing officers will carry on until the election of their successors at the first business meeting after the reopening of the club in January. The first meeting is always a "get acquainted" day, to which the wives of all members of Congress are invited, whether or not they are club members.

Present officers, in addition to Mrs. Reed, are Mrs. Otis S. Bland, of Virginia; Mrs. Harry L. Engelbright, of California; Mrs. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi; Mrs. Joe L. Smith, of Virginia, and Mrs. Wallace E. Larrabee, of Indiana, vice president; Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, of Missouri, recording secretary; Mrs. Karl Stefan, of Nebraska, corresponding secretary, and Mrs Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, treasurer.

All officers were present yesterday, but there was not the customary receiving line. The luncheon was informal and was served from a buffet table in the ballroom on the second floor. The centerpiece was a bouquet of blue cornflowers and yellow daisies, carrying out the club colors, blue and gold, and at either end was a large birthday cake, surrounded by candles—although not by the 30 symbolizing the club's years.

After the luncheon Mrs. Larrabee, who, with Mrs. Stefan and Mrs. Joe L. Smith, of West Virginia, comprised the committee, presented Mrs. Reed, who, in turn, introduced the honor guests. Each spoke briefly, and Mrs. Garrett, who is still an active member of the club, told of many amusing incidents which occurred when she first came to Washington. There was no organization then which provided opportunity for wives of new members of Congress to meet the others, she said.

Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, wife of Representative Woodruff, of Michigan, who has contributed to the musical life of the Capital while she has been here, sang a group of spring songs, "Who'll Buy My Lavendar?" "Answer" and "Happy Song." Her numbers were presented previous to the luncheon, with Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks as her accompanist.

Mrs. Ralph Church, who is closing her term as program chairman, later introduced eight pianists in a group of two-piano selections by modern composers as the program for the afternoon. They were all pupils of Katharine Frost and included the Misses Jane Ellison, Anne Rogers, Ann Watkins, Suzanne Marshall, Lisette Littlehales, Elizabeth Watkins, Harriet Eldridge and Virginia Spencer.

50 "Y" Girls Will Visit Camp

Nearly 50 girls of the Y. W. C. A Strong Residence will leave this afternoon for the week-end at Kamp Kahlert near Sudley, Md. Miss M. Florence Dunlap preceded the girls to prepare the camp for their coming. The bus will leave the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K streets at 2 o'clock and the girls will return on Monday. Miss Irene Dickson, Mrs. Ethel Wills, and Miss Katherine Burnett of the Strong Residence staff, are in charge of the arrangements.

While at camp the girls will engage in baseball games, boating, tennis and fishing.

Kamp Kahlert opens its fifteenth season on June 27. Miss Dunlap has been camp director for the past 14 years, and had much to do with the improvements at camp in material equipment and in the variety of program activities offered. She will again head the staff of counselors from all parts of the United States skilled in all types of camp arts, this season.

Among those registered for the week-end are Dale Aylesworth, Virginia Fisher, Elfrieda Edbert, Ruby Gregg, Dorothy Veon, Marion Towns, Alice Getty, Eula Treadway, Ella Watson, and Acta Bruncke.

Among others who will go are Virginia Burkhardt, Edith Muhonen, Claire Boyle, Lyndale Hall, Phillis Roos, Naify Cassis, Helen Halbig, Laura Wendt, Ellen Terry, Sylvia Socher, Winona Barger, Elizabeth Keim, Martha Swain, Martha Lide, Nellie Lee Dyer, Ella Watson, Anna Mae Digullian, Marie Terez, Pauline Gebig, Esther Canter, Margaret Konner, Sarah Brooks, Germaine Balanger, and Irma Smith.

Thursday night the Blue Triangle Club, of the Y. W. C. A., completed its club year with a closing banquet for which the theme was "Stars." The tables were arranged in the shape of a triangle in the center of which was a large bouquet of blue and white flowers on a small table. Around Barker Hall hung blue and silver stars of every size. The tables were sprinkled with stars and the programs were of blue with silver stars forming the Big Dipper.

Sara Motley, presided and introduced the "galaxy" of the guests, among whom were Miss Bertha Pabst, Miss Jean Carr, Miss Mary Burnett, Miss Mabel Cook, Miss Edith Dawson, Miss Margaret Mowbray, Mrs. Virginia Sholar and Miss Jessie Smith.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

MRS. W. E. ANDREWS entertained yesterday for the P. E. O.'s of Washington in honor of Mrs. LeRoy A. Palmer, a guest in the Capital and the oldest member of Chapter B, to which Mrs. Andrews belongs. Mrs. Palmer is here for a short visit on her way from Florida to New York to spend the summer with her son.

About 300 guests attended the affair, representing all 15 chapters —Chapter O having all but three of its members present. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Horton McKeever, Mrs. Grace Caldwell, Mrs. Raymond Wolfe, and Mrs. Robert Young; also Mrs. Ross Showalter, Miss Elizabeth Shelton and Miss Willamay Shelton who alternated at the punch table.

Flowers from the hostess' garden decorated the living room, and, in the dining room and elsewhere in the house bowls of trailing ivy were the decorations.

District of Columbia state officers who were among the guests included Dr. Ella R. Fales and Miss Laura Hanson, both past presidents; Mrs. W. W. Stockberger, the new president; Mrs. Robert Ferguson, first vice president, and Miss F. Elizabeth Reynolds, second vice president.

MISS MATTIE RICHARDS TYLER, national chairman of the Erna Berry Watson memorial fund of Beta Sigma Omicron Sorority, will go to Excelsior Springs, Mo., to preside as toastmistress at a banquet to be held at the convention, June 20-24, marking the society's jubilee year.

She has been working on a campaign for a $1,000 anniversary gift to be presented to Pine Mountain School in Kentucky for which the sorority provides a teacher. She is now within $175 of the goal. The alumnae chapter here, of which Mrs. Carl Giroux is president, held a successful benefit dinner at the Fairfax Hotel Wednesday night, bringing the fund for its contribution to the $100 mark. Mrs. Giroux has been responsible for raising the Washington quota.

Erna Berry Watson, for whom the fund was named, was for 14 years president of the sorority and greatly interested in the Pine Mountain School. Mrs. Robert F. Orth, of St. Louis, now is president. Three founders, still living, will be guests of honor at the banquet at which Miss Tyler will preside. They are Maude Haines Bernadin, of Kansas City; Eulalia Hockaday Sneed, of St. Louis, and Katherine Turner Spencer, who resides in France but is on a visit in this country.

MISS MARGUERITE MERIGOLD, retiring president of the D. C. branch of the League of American Pen Women, was presented a diamond-studded wrist watch when new officers were installed this week in appreciation of her service as president the last two years. Mrs Inez Sheldon Tyler, the new president, was author of a clever skit which was used to induct Miss Merigold into "the seats of the mighty," where past presidents already sat, crowned with laurel. The past presidents included Azalea Badgeley, Bess Heath Olmstead, Edna Knight Gasch and the founder, Miss Emma Triepel.

MRS. GEORGE C. ERNST has been elected president of the Newcomers Club of the University of Maryland, composed of women faculty members and faculty wives who have been connected with the university three years or less.

Other new officers are Mrs. M. M. Stevens, vice president; Mrs. Gordon W. Prange, secretary, and Mrs. John W. Magruder, treasurer.

Mrs. Lowdermilk To Speak on China

"My Ten Years in China" will be the topic of an address by Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk at a meeting in the chapel of the Methodist Building, 100 Maryland avenue northeast, Tuesday night, under the auspices of the department of international relations of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Lowdermilk, who has traveled thousands of miles in the interior of China, was engaged in educational work and was supervisor of 17 schools during her long residence there.

No admission will be charged, but an offering will be taken with which to buy food for Chinese war sufferers. It is estimtaed that five cents will pay for sufficient food to keep a mother and child alive 24 hours.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

While the Navy was hauling soldiers to France during the war, legend hath it that the diligent officers of Naval Intelligence compiled a list of 105,000 "suspects"—persons suspected of espionage, disloyalty or other indiscretions. That seems to be a lot of suspects—one out of every 19 patriots sent overseas.

* * * *

At the end of the war, so the story goes, President Wilson ordered this list destroyed . . . It was destroyed—but not until a number of copies of it had been made at the instance of officials who hated to see so much work wasted.

Anne Clark . . . winsome

Gossip hath it now that the list still exists . . . Naval Intelligence, quite rightly, prefers not to say whether it does or not . . . Some of the men so stigmatized, amid the hysteria of war, probably won medals at the front . . . Others presumably lie under marble crosses overseas. (And there must have been some spies on the list, too.)

"—Cal didn't seem to approve."

Tom Corcoran, the Presidential aide, has a neat trick with a telephone that other executives who work under pressure might like to imitate . . . When a call comes in one of his two phones, he tucks the receiver end between his ear, shoulder and neck so that the mouthpiece end is near his lips.

* * * *

Then he folds his arms, rests them on the edge of his desk, and relaxes for what is often a longish telephonic conference. Until the conversation reaches its climaxes his tone is soft and tender; then it becomes staccato and emphatic . . . He feels this method makes phoning much less of a strain.

* * * *

One of the grimmest bits of portraiture in Washington is the painting of Cal Coolidge which hangs in a corner of the foyer at the main central entrance of the White House . . . At a White House party the other evening Secretaries Wallace and Woodring and their ladies sat around a small table with several journalistic couples who were drinking beer . . . The Cabinet couples were not drinking—whether because they don't like beer or because of Cal's disapproving expression is anybody's guess.

"—young John thought it warm"

At one point John stopped at his father's chair, at one end of the room, and remonstrated with him spiritedly because the house he thought, was too warm.

But turning on a cooling system in May, even in Washington, is as extravagant as turning the furnaces on in September.

* * * *

Many New Deal lawyers argue that Justice Black is right and the rest of the Supreme Court wrong about his dissenting opinion that the fourteenth amendment didn't mean corporations when it said a "person" cannot be deprived of property without due process of law.

But some of them (and one high-placed lawyer in particular) feel that during his novitiate it would be better tactics to refrain from too many solitary dissents.

"Even if Justice Black is right," said this personage, "what's the use of a dissent when Brandeis and Stone don't dissent? A decision with which they don't dissent can't be so illiberal as to mean the end of the world."

* * * *

As another illustration of the soul-stirring problems that an official wife encounters, let me cite the case of a lady who was anxious to leave a party because she had a date with her dentist . . . But she couldn't leave, she felt, until the ranking guest left—a Cabinet lady . . . So she waited impatiently, her tooth aching.

Finally the most august guest departed, and the young wife hastily got into her car to drive downtown from the suburban house . . . But the Cabinet lady was driving very, very slowly, about 15 miles an hour, and the other girl thought it might be a faux pas to pass her on the road.

Finally, in sheer desperation, she scrunched down behind her wheel, hiding her face as much as possible, and swooped past without honking, hoping she had not been recognized.

Two Chain-Letter Schemes Reported Circulating Here

A variation of the dime chain letter scheme, this time requiring a 25-cent outlay and holding out hopes of $256 in return, has been reported in circulation in Washington, it was said yesterday at the Postoffice Department.

Sponsor of the latest get-rich-quick plan is listed as the "Vacation Club" in the letter, which states that the purpose of the scheme is to provide holidays "and is not backed by money-making ideas."

Pointing out that this disclaimer would not exempt persons circulating such letters from Federal prosecution for fraudulent use of the mails, a postoffice official said, "It would be mathematically impossible for this scheme, like any other endless chain, to pay off."

Letters promoting a "Handkerchief Club" are also in circulation in Washington and other sections of the country, according to postal authorities.

Held on Morals Charge.

Prince Georges County police last night arrested Clarence Ransom, 24, of Carmody Hills, Md., and held him for Fairfax County (Va.) authorities on a warrant charging a statutory offense. He was arrested on the complaint of a 19-year-old Washington girl.

Board Is Given Plan to Glorify East Capitol St.

Thoroughfare Would Be 160 Feet Wide, With Imposing Buildings.

A long-range scheme to convert East Capitol street from its present into a monumental thoroughfare lined on either side with imposing buildings was outlined yesterday to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

As explained by William T. Partridge, architectural consultant, the street would be widened to 160 feet—it is now 50—and embellished with service drives and parking strips, making it the Constitution avenue of East Washington.

Improvement of the thoroughfare, now occupied by dwellings, stores, the Capital's largest high school (Eastern) and a street car barn, was considered as one major phase of a general scheme to rehabilitate the eastern half of the District. The plan envisages a stadium, an armory and a huge recreation center at the foot of the street.

The commission will give the study careful consideration, said Thomas S. Settle, secretary.

Approval "in principle" was accorded plans for a vehicular underpass at Thomas Circle, along the line of Massachusetts avenue, also plans for a K street bypass through Georgetown. Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, described both projects, funds for which are provided in the 1938 appropriations act.

Likewise the principle of a "super highway" between New York and Washington, as advocated in a bill recently introduced by Representative Drew (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, was approved. Commission members pointed out that the scheme could be made to tie in with its plan for a modern traffic artery linking Washington and Baltimore.

The latter project, which bears indorsement of the National Resources Committee, and other highway problems affecting the District and suburban Maryland were discussed by C. P. Taylor, of the Maryland highway commission.

Class Warned On 'Isms' Peril At Dunbarton

Mgr. McCormick Delivers Graduating Address for 17 Girls.

A graduating class of 17 members at Dunbarton College was warned at commencement exercises yesterday against "the vicious attacks upon our present type of democracy which come from those who seek to overthrow it" by the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University.

Desire for the overthrow of American democracy, Mgr. McCormick said, comes from those who "have succeeded in overthrowing other forms of government by deluding the people with such ideas as those represented by social democrary, socialism and communism. Often it is only the educated who can appreciate the false philosophy behind these movements, and it is the duty of those who know to warn the masses and protect them in advance."

He told the graduates it will be their duty to "instruct the masses to respect their employers and to do honest work. They are not to have the servile attitude of the peon or the slave, but as Christians, possessing their own individual rights, they are to render an honest return in labor."

Graduates were Doris Balson, Rita Conlon, Rose Ellen Dobbyn, Agnes Doherty, Agnes Drew, Elinor Fox, Jane Frances Houston, Mildred Lucas, Marie Ruble, Marie Russell, Mary Sheehy, Margaret Shireman, Eleanor Thomaides, Margaret Viehmann, Anna Marie Walsh, Elizabeth Williams and Vivian Wilson.

The processional included members of the faculty and the graduating class. The valedictory was by Miss Thomaides, and Dr. Roy Defarrari, secretary general of Catholic University, presented junior college certificates. Julia Rittenhouse gave a piano selection and Anne Hunt a violin number.

Tram Victim Identified.

Youth Can Save World, Pastor Says at Dinner

'Older People Have Made a Mess,' Audience of 200 Is Told.

If the world is to be saved, it will be saved by the Christian youth of all nations working toward a common understanding of each other's problems, said the Rev. Arthur P. Wilson in an address last night at Ninth Street Christian Church, where the annual youth banquet was held.

"The older people have made a mess of things and conditions are getting worse," declared the speaker, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church. "Youth should be placed at the council tables of the world, since the adults have been sitting there since 1918 without accomplishing anything," he told an audience of more than 200 young men nad women.

Following out the theme of "Christ Looks at Youth of All Nations," a program of songs, skits and brief talks depicting characteristics of many countries was staged in the Parish Hall. The invocation was by Joseph A. Scott, and the Rev. Clifford Jope, pastor of Ninth Street Church, led the closing ceremony.

George Oliver Taylor, religious education director of the Chesapeake area of the Christian Church, acted as toastmaster, and Elmer H. Whitney was general banquet chairman and head of the "youth month" committee. Women of the congregation served the dinner.

Navy Hero's Kin Named To Sponsor Destroyer

Mrs. Frederick S. Camp, of Norwich, Conn., has been named sponsor for the new United States destroyer Rhind, Secretary of the Navy Swanson announced yesterday. The ship is named for her great-granduncle, the late Rear Admiral Alexander Colden Rhind.

Admiral Rhind commanded the Keokuk in the attack on Charleston, S. C., April 7, 1863. He also served with distinction in the bombardment of Fort Fisher, N. C., in 1864.

The Women's Club of Wilson Teachers College last night jumped the gun on Leap Year with a "vice versa dance" held in the college little theater.

Seventy girls "dated" an equal number of boys, sent corsages to their blushing partners, called for them and piloted them around the dance floor at intermission time. There was even an all-female stag line.

After a grand march featuring the latest thing in male corsages, first prize for the most striking display was awarded to Ray King, George Washington University freshman. King's escort was Miss Edna Moore, whose floral creation for her partner consisted of cherries, cauliflower, carrots and parsley, the whole job being mounted on paper doilies and light shrubbery.

Other corsages fancied by the judges included radishes, pipe cleaners, mint, onions, lollipops and perishable vegetables. A few girls had decorated their swains with conventional posies.

The "vice versa" theme was well sustained until the band played "Good Night, Sweetheart." At that point, according to the committee on arrangements, the boys had a tendency to take the girls home.

Quantrille, Milton Convicted in Theft Of Safe and $1,200

Carmon Quantrille, 36, and Henry R. Milton, 35, yesterday were convicted in District Court of stealing a 1-ton safe, containing $1,200, from the Washington Beef & Provision Co., 1110 E street southwest, September 11, 1937.

The jury returned a "guilty" verdict after 20 minutes of deliberation on the grand larceny and housebreaking charges.

Detectives Frank Brass and Jack Baker testified that they traced a WPA check for $21.20, known to have been in the stolen safe, through four persons to Quantrille, arresting him September 25. Milton was picked up a week later at a beer garden near Laurel, after the detectives had kept a two-day vigil.

Sentence for the two men has not yet been set. The case was heard before Judge Jesse C. Adkins.

Tax Payments Here for Year Mark Record

97.37 Per Cent of Gross Receipts and Personal Property Levies Paid.

A new record in payments of tangible and intangible property taxes and gross receipts taxes was reported yesterday to the District Commissioners.

Charles A. Russell, deputy tax assessor, said the District has collected 97.37 per cent of the total of bills in these three classifications, more than a month before the end of the fiscal year.

The tax bills for the tangible and intangible personal property taxes and for the gross receipts and gross earnings taxes on banks, utilities and railways is $6,454,259, an increase of $708,579 over the amount for the fiscal year 1937. Of this sum only $169,896, or 2.63 per cent, remains to be collected.

The base assessment for tangible personal property for this year was figured at $81,566,107, an increase of $12,115,032 over the valuations for the last fiscal year. The 1938 tax bill on tangible property was $1,426,174, an increase of $385,736.

The tax base for intangible personal property for this fiscal year totalled $575,472,070, an increase of more than 48 million dollars over the past fiscal year. The 1938 tax bill for intangibles was $2,877,360, or an increase of $252,471.

The various gross receipts and gross earnings taxes, not including the business privilege tax on gross receipts, was found to total $2,150,125, or an increase of $70,673.

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MAY 28, 1938 ****

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There on top are the Cleveland Indians, but by what right? Let's investigate. There seems to be nothing wrong with the figures. The Indians have lost fewer games than any club in the league and have won more. That always adds up to the league lead. But the Indians call for inspection, nevertheless.

POVICH.

That Cleveland pitching staff stands out. Every other manager in the league has his pitching troubles but Oscar Vitt simply gives the ball to one of his right-handers or Earl Whitehill and says "Here, give me a well-pitched ballgame." And Allen, Feller, Harder and Hudlin most always do it. The Indians have pitching.

But it is because they have the league lead that we are chiefly interested. How did they get it? They got it by knocking off the Eastern clubs in Cleveland during the past two weeks. Ha! That's a clew. Again this year the Indians are winning those home games. What did they do on the road in their first Eastern trip? They folded like a leg full of sciatic nerves. Away from that nice, short right field fence in the Cleveland park they couldn't win. If the Indians could take that fence with 'em to New York, Boston, Washington and Chicago they'd look a lot more important up there at the top of the league.

There's Boston in second place and doing very well. But is at a solid club? They have Grove who in his fifteenth year in the big leagues is off to his absolute finest start of any season with his eight straight wins. And they have Jack Wilson. He's a good pitcher, too. But Joe Cronin is probably suffering from eye strain trying to spot another consistent winner on his staff. Despite Grove and Wilson, the Red Sox have their pitching troubles.

But they're dangerous. Any club with Jimmy Foxx, Joe Cronin and Lefty Grove having one of their very best years, is dangerous. At least as dangerous as any club that doesn't have a first-rating catching staff, a none-too-spry third baseman, a weak-hitting second baseman and seven right-handed hitters can be. But there they are, only two games out of the lead.

Look at the Yankees. There's nothing wrong with the figures that show 'em in third place. Not a very lofty position for a team that was a 3-to-5 shot to win the pennant. What is wrong? But before we go into that, remember that any time the Yankees are only three games out of the lead, they must still be reckoned with—plenty. One of those Yankee winning streaks could raise hob with the standings.

But there DOES appear to be something definitely wrong. Right off the bat, it's evident that Lefty Gomez is no longer the same dependable pitcher. And he hasn't been losing only the close ones. He's been taking a fearful shellacking in most of his starts. Subtract a Gomez from any pitching staff and it hurts. But that isn't all. Lou Gehrig has not yet been able to get up a gallop at the plate. This might be the year when Gehrig cracks. That would be too bad. And not a single Yankee rookie from Newark has panned out. Donald has already been sent back; Beggs can't win. Bill Knickerbocker took Joe Gordon's job away from him. The Yankees aren't inspiring the same awe. Other clubs have begun to get the idea the Yanks can be licked. That will make it a closer race, with the Yanks still the favorites.

Which brings us down to fourth place—and the Nats. There is evidence that Washington was a flash in the pan. Bucky Harris' club somehow took the lead and held it for awhile in the first month of the campaign despite the fact he was getting neither capable pitching or good hitting. He doesn't have a bona fide star on his staff. Emil Leonard's collapse—he lost his last three starts—has been a cruel blow. Leonard was the basis of most of Harris' pitching hopes.

There is no evidence that the Nats have the hitting to offset their pitching weakness. The batting averages look good enough, but they are not powerhouse sluggers. Zeke Bonura's slugging has been in streaks. Away from Griffith Stadium, where Harris' slow-ball pitchers have the advantage that comes from distant fences, the Nats have not been a good ball team. In fact, they are getting the reputation of being a miserable club on the road. This season they have lost 15 out of 20 games on foreign fields.

And now entering the second division we find the Chicago White Sox in fifth place. Which is apparently where they belong. Because all of Jimmy Dykes' trades have worked out wrong. Joe Kuhel, until he was hurt, had driven in only two runs in 17 games. Jackie Hayes, until the other day, had driven in only one run. Without the injured Luke Appling, the Sox don't have the power.

And when they traded away Vernon Kennedy to the Tigers they gave up a pitcher who has won six and lost none this season. Ted Lyons works on an average of only once in ten days and Monty Stratton has yet to prove that his sore arm has recovered. Gerald Walker is hitting 100 points under the figure he had with the Tigers last season. At Chicago, it's a pretty dismal picture.

* * * *

Down in sixth place are the Detroit Tigers and the first reaction is that they don't belong there. But that smacks of the crack that they can't put you in jail.

Women Stars In 18-Hole Match Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 27.—Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Baltimore's only hope and pride in the Maryland State women's golf championship, survived today's semifinals to enter the ultimate bracket for the first time in this event. She will meet the defending champion, Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Elkridge Hunt Club.

The week's strain and severe test of her first championship flight finally broke Mrs. Myron Davey's game. She is the remarkable Congressional Country Club entry who slashed her handicap from a 1937 30 to a 1938 8 and who lost to Mrs. Sloman, 8 and 6, today.

Miss Dettweiler did not finish her match at the usual spot, the fourteenth green, today. Mrs. L. G. Pray, of the District, carried her to the fifteenth hole before losing 4 and 3. Miss Dettweiler was out in 44 and Mrs. Pray in 45.

Gets Early Lead.

The 1937 winner took the second and fourth and her rival the first and seventh. Miss Dettweiler's second was trapped, she missed her third and got on the first green in five to lose. Miss Dettweiler scored a birdie 5 on the second where Mrs. Pray overshot the green in five and conceded the hole. The first applause came at the fourth when Miss Dettweiler's iron stroke winged over the trees to the green When Mrs. Pray trapped and failed to come out on her first try, she conceded the hole.

The sixth hole, Miss Dettweiler one-putted to halve, and on the seventh she went out of bounds to lose. Mrs. Pray shared the eighth on the strength of a single putt. Miss Dettweiler overapproached the ninth, but halved it.

Miss Dettweiler was longer off the tee. This was particularly evident on the second nine, when she clamped down to win four of the five holes. After taking the tenth, she annexed the eleventh with a birdie 4, getting on in 2 and down in 2. Both drove the rough on the twelfth, Mrs. Pray needing five strokes to land on the green. Miss Dettweiler was above the 455-yard hole in three strokes to go 3 up, with a par 5.

Stymie Costs Hole.

A dead stymie cost Mrs. Pray the fourteenth, where she had a fine second shot on the carpet. A special rule helped Miss Dettweiler on the fifteenth. Her tee shot was embedded in the mud on the green, 175 yards away. But she was allowed to lift it without penalty. She won this for the match.

Mrs. Vare Takes Quaker Golf Title

Philadelphia, May 27 (AP).—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare won the Philadelphia women's golf championship for the third time today, defeating Mrs. Norman Lack, of Wilmington, 5 and 4, on the 18-hole Merion East Course.

Mrs. Vare was even par for the 14 holes, over a wet and fog-covered course.

Mrs. Lack, who won the title in 1932 and 1933, played steady for 11 holes, but went out of the contest on two bad holes.

Hank Greenberg Slams Record Homer in 5-2 Victory.

Chicago, May 27 (AP).—Vernon Kennedy, wiry Detroit screwball hurler, came back today to the diamond he called home for three years and, with the aid of timely supporting offense that included a 440-foot park record homer by Hank Greenberg, defeated his old White Sox mates, 5 to 2, on six hits for his seventh consecutive victory.

Greenberg's homer, his eleventh of the season, was the first ever hit into the dead centerfield bleachers since the stands were erected in 1927. The drive, at the expense of Frank Gabler, former National Leaguer making his home debut as a Chicagoan, cleared the 15-foot wall 440 feet from the plate and landed in the front rows. The blow was hit with none on in the third inning.

Greenberg, who returned today to his old cleanup spot in the batting order, also hit two singles to lead the Tigers' ten-hit attack.

Cub Catcher Hits Home Run, 2 Singles to Aid Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 27.—Bill Lee's right arm and Gabby Hartnett's big bat sank the revamped Pirates, 5 to 0, today and carried Chicago's Cubs to within two games of first place in the National League.

Lee hurled a six-hitter and allowed only two runners to get past second base in whitewashing the Bucs, and Hartnett hammered a three-run homer and a pair of singles. Between them they more than took care of the situation to stretch the Cubs' winning streak to four straight.

Back in form again after a slow start this season, Lee posted his third straight victory and his second shutout in three starts. With today's game he has allowed only one run and 17 hits in 27 innings against the Pirates, Boston Bees and New York Giants.

Central Wins Track Meet

Scores 71½ Points; Tech 2d, Roosevelt 3d.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Compiling a total of 71½ points, Central's track team won its second straight public school victory in the forty-first annual Inter-High school track and field meet held at Central Stadium yesterday.

Tech finished second by amassing 60½ points while Roosevelt gathered 28 points to place third. Woodrow Wilson High School, entering the meet for the first time, surprised the field by totaling 19 to wind up in fourth place. Eastern was fifth with 16, while Western took sixth place with 15.

The record for the running broad jump was broken in the outstanding performance of the day. Baulser, of Tech, leaped 22 feet 5 inches to crack the old mark set by Beers, of Western in 1932. In the low hurdles which was considered a new event because the hurdles were 3 inches shorter last year, Leonberger, of Tech, skimmed over the wood in 16 seconds flat. Miles, of Eastern, established a meet record in 1929 of 16 seconds while using the old-type hurdles.

In the trials, Leonberger and Pisciotta, of Roosevelt, made the distance in 15.8 seconds, but officials of the meet stated that this time could not be recognized as a new record because of the fact that the event was, as mentioned before, a new one. But it will be recorded in the books for future inter high youngsters to break.

Wilbur Barr, a hefty lad with plenty of arm power won the javelin throw for Central with a heave of 161 feet ¼ inch. This did not break any record, in fact, it was 10 feet short of the mark set by MacDonald, of Tech, in 1926 of 171 feet 5 inches, but it was one of the outstanding field exhibitions of the day. The nearest one to Barr was Baulser, of Tech, with a toss of 141 feet 5 inches.

Summaries:

100-YARD DASH—First, Durett (Western); second, Zuppa (Central); third, Hoadley (Central); fourth, Napoli (Roosevelt); fifth, Speith (Eastern). Time, 10.2 seconds.

BROAD JUMP—First, Baulser (Tech); second, Ferguson (Central); third, Woodson (Wilson) fourth, Kelly (Wilson); fifth, Ellis (Roosevelt). New record. Distance, 22 feet 5 inches. (Old record, 21 feet 10 inches, made by Beers, of Western, in 1932.)

HIGH JUMP—First, Hoaley (Central); second, Fanning (Central); third, Grim (Central); fourth, Hamacher (Tech); fifth, Gilmore (Tech). Height, 5 feet 9¼ inches. (All three of Central's jumpers were tied for first place. They tossed for medals. The fourth and fifth place entrants also tied.)

SHOT-PUT—First, Fleishman (Tech); second, Lane (Western; third, Fulton (Roosevelt); fourth, Inglesias (Western); fifth, Schiup (Roosevelt). Distance, 45 feet 6½ inches.

POLE VAULT—First, Baxter (Central); second, tie between McMasters (Tech) and Detoriel (Tech); third, tie between Dawes (Central) and Bach (Tech). Distance, 10 feet 6 inches.

Ross-Armstrong Fight Put Off Till Tuesday; Ticket Sale Lags

Ducats Being Turned In in a Steady Stream; Long Wait May Hurt Armstrong's Chances.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, May 27.—Promoter Mike Jacobs took a long side-wise gander at a cluster of ominous clouds playing tag among Gotham's tapering spires today, and promptly ordered the Barney Ross, Henry Armstrong world welterweight championship bout postponed until Tuesday night.

It now looks as though Ross may encounter a series of setbacks rivaling the five postponements of his third scrap with Jimmy McLarnin. News of the delay left the title-holder firmly entrenched behind 8-to-5 odds, for Armstrong's high-strung temperament doesn't jibe with postponements.

Ross, however, is faced with a second jinx in addition to the "no-champion - ever - won - in-the-Bowl" hoodoo. It is remembered that the last time a bout was postponed on him, he dropped his crown. The battling bridegroom remained calm, composed and jovial, however, while Armstrong literally tore his hair.

The delay is doubly irksome to Jacobs, because it virtually seals the show's doom, financially, and clips precious days off the ballyhoo for the Schmeling-Louis heavyweight bout June 22. At best the white elephant Michael now has on his chubby hands is expected to net a healthy deficit when all the pennies are counted. A top gate of $125,000 is the best hoped for by box-office officials.

Jawn Just Fooling.

Both fighters, meanwhile, reported at the athletic commission office for a second weighing in, only to learn that Maj. Gen. Jawn Joseph Phelan (retired) was only fooling about riding the scales again.

"I just wanted to make sure you boys were fit to go oh." he told the prospective combatants. "We don't want any duds."

Interest in the proposed fight has waned around town, and tickets have been returned by handfuls. Most fans are more or less—mostly more—disgusted with the fight, the weather and the somewhat soggy publicity attendant upon it. They prefer to discuss the forthcoming "big" fight—or baseball.

Of the second postponement has been born that momentous question. "What would Ross or Armstrong, take your choice, have done had the fight gone on schedule?" Everybody has a different answer and a private theory in support of it. The question promises to rival the fiery debate following the celebrated "long count" of the second Tunney-Dempsey fight at Chicago.

"He'll Beat Ross."

It was "did he (Tunney) get a long count or not?" after the Chicago bout. The question now is, "Would he, (Armstrong or Ross) have belted him out or won a decision?" or "could Henry have gone 25 rounds at his blistering pace?"

It's a delicate matter, but boxing devotees rush in where most people fear to tread.

Armstrong today told friends a delay of a few days, or few weeks for that matter, would make little difference.

"I'll knock 'im out in eight rounds!" he said. He worked out at Lou Stillman's music museum at 2:30 o'clock and Ross followed him an hour later.

American Legion Sets Double Bills for June

Chicago, May 27 (AP).—William Harridge, president of the American League, announced tonight June dates for the play off of postponed games among the eight clubs. New York's Yankees led the list with a total of six double headers ahead of them next month.

Princeton and Harvard Set Grill Drill Limit

New York, May 27 (AP).—Princeton and Harvard, while reaffirming the 1923 "triple agreement" with Yale regarding athletics, have adopted the miximum of 22 days of pre-season football practice in the autumn.

The change provides a uniform period of 22 days prior to the opening game in each October for pre-season practice. It replaces a period varying with the calendar from 16 days or more which resulted from the fixed starting date of September 15 in the old agreement. Yale will adhere to the September 15 start.

Young Star Is Favored In 36 Holes

By the Associated Press.

Troon, Scotland, May 27.—One hundred yards from the sea and nine feet from glory, Charley Yates, of Atlanta, stood on the nineteenth green of the old Troon Course this evening and made golfing history as 10,000 Scots surrounded him.

Hector Thomson, his rival in this semifinal match of the British Amateur Golf championship, stood aside and twitched nervously at his putter. Then Yates, with a tug at his cap and scarcely a glance at his line, walked up and stroked his ball across those nine green feet and into the cup for a Birdie 3.

When the ball vanished into the cup, Yates took off his cap. One American let out the Southern Rebel yell. Charley looked around and smiled. He was in the final round of the British amateur—the first American ever to get there without previous competitive experience in the gusting, veering winds of these sea-side links.

Lawson Little, of San Francisco, gained the first of his two victories right down the shore at Prestwick in 1934, but before that he had played in the Walker Cup matches at St. Andrews and knew what to expect from the Scottish wind.

Faces Ewing Today.

But Yates came in cold. He practiced punching low iron shots under the watchful eye of George Sargent at East Lake, in Atlanta, but he didn't know how valuable that practice was until he got here.

Tomorrow in the 36-hole final he meets Cecil Ewing, conqueror of United States Walker Cup Capt. Francis Ouimet on Wednesday and of C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, of Canada, 2 up, in the other semifinal this afternoon. The gigantic Irish insurance agent, one of the longest hitters in the game, is a determined and, for this week at least, a lucky golfer. But he is given only a 1-to-2 chance of beating the Atlantan.

Grabs Early Lead.

Just as in his morning quarter-final victory over Cyril Tolley, he had raced away to the turn and was 3 up with a 34, 2 under par. But he lost the tenth, twelfth and fifteenth and now it was a match.

For the first time this week Charley began holding on to his putter and falling short with the long ones. He kept tugging at that old tan cap. All week he had been smiling. Now he was grim and tense.

That tenseness showed at the seventeenth, where he sliced his drive to be one down. When he walked over to the eighteenth tee, Charley appeared to be beaten.

But on No. 13 Thomson hooked his drive into a bunker and Yates had his chance. He fairly divided the fairway with his drive, clipped his approach 15 feet from the cup and was saved.

Of today's six matches, only Yates' defeat of Tolly, like Thomson a former champion, was at all decisive. Ewing had to go the full eighteen to beat Johnny Stevenson of Troon, 1-up, in his quarter-final; Somerville beat H. W. Hattersley, of Australia, 2-up, in his morning match, and Thomson, beaten by Yates in his third extra-hole match, had won out on the twentieth from Leonard Crawley, a fellow-Walker cupper.

Reds Defeat Cards, 2 to 1

Vander Meer and McGee Stage Night Duel.

Cincinnati, May 27 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds won a brilliant pitching duel between Johnny Vander Meer and Bill McGee, 2 to 1, tonight in the tenth inning when Virgil Davis and Craft hit successive doubles to beat the St. Louis Cardinals in the first night game of the season.

White Hot Wins Suffolk Feature

Boston, May 27 (AP).—Leading from flagfall to finish, F. W. Webb's White Hot accounted for the mile and 70 yards feature by a length over A. C. Compton's Gerald in the good time of 1:44 2-5 today in the mud at Suffolk Downs.

White Hot paid $10 to win and Gerald brought $4 for place, gained by two and a half lengths on H. P. Metcalf's High Velocity, that was worth $2.20 for show.

A crowd of 10,500 saw the gelded son of Sir Greysteel dispose of a fair field of handicap performers. Alfred Shelhammer took Gerald under restraint while persuing White Hot's early pace, but in the stretch he moved up on the inside and offered the winner a determined challenge. High Velocity, the 4-to-5 favorite, was in position to move to the first flight in the home stretch, but was unable to make a strong bid in his first New England start of the season.

Aurora Feature To Merry Caroline

Chicago, May 27 (AP). — Merry Caroline, Paul Kelley's consistent mare, outran Gold Mesh in a thrilling stretch duel at Aurora today to win the featured Max Sussman purse by a nose. Bomber finished third.

In scoring her third straight victory of the meeting and her seventh in nine starts, Merry Caroline ran the 6 furlongs in 1:15 3-5 over a slow track and paid $6.80. In her other two starts, Merry Caroline was second.

Jockey James G. Wilson had Merry Caroline ahead from the start. In the stretch, when Gold Mesh challenged from the outside, the two drew well away from the field and finished so close together that a photo decision was necessary. Victory was Wilson's second of the day and his twenty-eighth in 23 days. It also was the final day for Aurora's leading jockey with an apprentice allowance.

Leonard Faces Red Sox, and Jim Bagby

By Shirley Povich.

A band of battered and road-weary Nats return to Griffith Stadium today as a fourth-place ball club, sadder, wiser and thoroughly chastised.

They are sadder because when they set forth gaily two weeks ago for adventures in the West they were leading the league; wiser because they know now that they overrated their pitching staff and chastised because they underestimated the opposition.

The team that won only 3 of its 12 games on the road trip detrained at Union Station last night to be greeted only by a mob of redcaps who, for the usual fee, would carry their bags to taxis. There was no admiring throng of fans.

Today, at Griffith Stadium, they will be faced by the club that started 'em skidding out of the league lead earlier in the month—the Boston Red Sox, who won three straight games from the Nats in Boston.

The customers who see Emil Leonard and his knuckle ball take the mound against the Red Sox this afternoon will be watching a rookie who was a sad disappointment on the Western trip. The toast of Washington fandom after his early-season pitching at Griffith Stadium, Leonard during the past two weeks has been beaten at Boston, at Cleveland and Chicago. In each start he failed to survive the fifth inning.

Manager Joe Cronin will send Young Bagby, who has won only two games, against Dutch.

Following games with the Red Sox today and tomorrow, the Nats will invade Philadelphia for a Decoration Day double-header with the Athletics. They return to Griffith Stadium on Tuesday to open a long home stand against the Western clubs.

Taft Wright's home run in St. Louis on Wednesday was the first in his big league career, but it was against orders.

With the bases full, the score tied and the count two balls and no strikes on Wright, he looked to Manager Bucky Harris on the coaching line for a sign. Harris gave him the "take" sign, meaning to let the next pitch pass. Wright misread it and swung. Harris forgave him when his swing produced four runs for the Nats.

Despite Ken Chase's unimpressive relief shift against the Browns, Manager Bucky Harris is determined to start the rookie southpaw in a regular turn. "If he gets by the first two or three innings, he figures to win his game," said Harris. "He'll probably start against the Red Sox on Sunday."

Judge Landis Ouster Sought by Branch Rickey, Report Says

Four Owners Said Backing Cards' Move

Cleveland Paper Reports Rickey Will Stump to 'Get' Czar.

Cleveland, May 27.—The Plain Dealer will say tomorrow Branch Rickey, St. Louis Cardinals' vice president, "is out to 'get,'" Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner.

"Rickey's efforts will take the direction of electioneering among his fellow club executives against reappointment of Landis" when his term expires December 15, 1941, the paper says in a staff special from St. Louis.

Rickey "already is said to have the support of Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Brooklyn in the National and of St. Louis in the American." Which means, the Plain Dealer says, he must persuade four other clubs that their interests demand the installation of a new commissioner.

The paper says the Cardinal official is irked because "Landis has never approved the chain store system of baseball developed by Rickey" and has "used his power to crack down on the Cardinals at every turn."

The paper cited Landis' recent decision making 90 players free agents from St. Louis' Minor League properties, and the commissioner's order against releasing Pitchers Silas Johnson and Roy Henshaw to the Cards' International League farm at Rochester to get down to the 23-player limit.

The players appealed on the ground they had not received a thorough trial with St. Louis. All Major League clubs had waived on them.

Landis has been baseball's czar since 1921.

Central High Beaten, 8-1

Fredericksburg Closes Season With Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 27.—The Fredericksburg High School Yellow Jackets brought their season to a close here this afternoon by defeating Central High, of Washington, 8 to 1.

Randy Heflin, stellar Fredericksburg moundsman, allowed only three hits and struck out 13 men. Opposing him was Dezerne for Central, who was nicked for six hits and struck out 12.

Fredericksburg got off to a start in the first when Duke Ellington smacked a home run with two aboard. Ellington hit another four-bagger in the eighth with one on.

Central scored its lone run in the second. Central's hits were widely separated, getting one in the first, and another in the sixth, and the third blow in the eighth.

The game marked the last athletic contest over which Johnny Fenlon will guide a Fredericksburg High squad. He leaves after this season for the University of Richmond to become freshman coach.

There they are, and they've been playing sixth-place baseball. But a team that boasts Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Rudy York, and Pete Fox is not apt to be a second-division club. The Tigers appear destined for better things.

But Mickey Cochrane has his pitching troubles. Tommy Bridges, his stand-by for years, has a sore arm. Roxie Lawson, Elden Auker and Boots Poffenberger are not startling anybody this season. There is a bit of sunshine for Cochrane in the fact that Schoolboy Rowe has done tolerably well in his last two starts. But Greenberg and York aren't hitting .300. That hurts, particularly with Cochrane's pitchers pitching the way they are.

A Case for Landis: Charley Keller, Former Terp Ace, Is Kept 'Buried' by the N. Y. Yankees

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27. — If the gruff old judge really cares to get at the bottom of the so-called run-around business in baseball, he might forget the cases of Pitchers Si Johnson and Pee Wee Henshaw and focus his spyglass on a young fellow named Charlie Keller, of Newark.

While Judge Landis, lord high executioner of baseball moguls, frets and hands out a decision forcing the St. Louis Cardinals to do right by Si and Pee Wee, the 21-year-old star of the Newark International Leaguers reads the major league box scores and wonders what a fellow must do to become a big leaguer. So far, Charlie has done about everything for the Yankee farm club but balance the budget.

It happens the New York Yankees now have so many good ball players, excepting pitchers, they can't use them all. Keller's hope of crashing into Col. Ruppert's big back yard is Outfielder George Selkirk. If George doesn't improve in health soon, Charlie may get his chance, but George has a habit of making quick recoveries whenever Keller's name is mentioned.

Rival club owners have been shouting and bidding for Keller's services all winter and spring—in vain. "We'd gladly give $75,000 for Keller, because he's a great ball player whose punch might even land us a pennant," sobbed old Bob Quinn, of the hustling Boston Bees, "but it's no sale. Instead, the Yanks keep him in hock at Newark."

Other club owners also have made fancy bids, but the smart colonel has treated them all like a glass of stale, rival beer—and you can't blame him. And yet, where does Keller come in? At last reports he was getting $400 a month, approximately the interest the colonel could receive for 75 grand if he socked it away in a bank. Even so, Charlie surrendered a scheme to pick up some extra dough by playing pro basketball last winter because the Yankee front office was scared he might get hurt.

It is doubtful whether any young player, excepting Bobby Feller, ever came up with such a spectacular rush as the boy from Middletown, Md., and the University of Maryland. After two years of semipro ball, he got on with Newark. In his first turn at bat for the Bears he served as a pinch-hitter down at Sebring, Fla., against Whitey Moore, of the Cincy Reds, and tripled.

In his first year, Charlie, a 185-pounder spread over a 5 foot 10½ inch frame, hit International League pitching for .353, batting .373 at home and .335 on the road. His jinx park was Syracuse, where he batted .272. Over the season, the sensational young outfielder hit 13 homers, 34 doubles, 14 triples and drove in 88 runs, hitting in fifth position. As a starter, he hit safely the first 17 games. Added to it all is great ability as a fielder and a fine throwing arm.

So far this season, Charlie is hitting .400.. Until a few days ago he was so hard to get out he was belting the apple at a .500 clip.

Though a wolf in sheep's clothing for the opposition, Charlie is as much of a hero in other ball parks as he is in Newark. Up in Montreal last June 20, the customers gave him an unforgettable ovation when he finished his day's work in a double-header by getting seven hits in eight chances.

Judge Landis certainly must know his business, and while there's no rule to force the Yankees to bring Charlie up this year, there should be. Over in Newark, they wouldn't swap Charlie right now for any Yankee ball player except Joe DiMaggio!

'Y' Presents 300 Awards To Juniors

Nearly 300 awards were made last night to boys at the annual junior athletic banquet of the boys' department of the Central Young Men's Christian Association, held in the Central "Y" Building, 1736 G street northwest.

The awards were presented in behalf of the Y. M. C. A. by Birch E. Bayh, director of health and physical education, District public schools, following an address by Louis B. Nichols, administrative assistant of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Charles E. Krey, chairman of the boys' work committee of the Y. M. C. A., was toastmaster. Invocation was delivered by the Rev. Harold Beatty, pastor of Georgetown Lutheran Church. The banquet program included a tap dance by Miss Z. Weightman, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. R. H. Gaber.

The medal for the year's outstanding athlete was awarded to Thomas Hollon, who won the 130-pound junior wrestling championship of the "Y," in addition to being a leader in several other sports. John Hoffschildt was awarded the medal as the high point winner in dual and championship swimming meets.

Silver star pins were awarded to seven boys who have won "Y" emblems three years. They were James Walters, Alexander Papanicolas, Thomas Hollon, David Davis, John Bender, Richard Brown and Daniel Hollon.

Other of the more important awards were made to the following:

Christmas athletic tournament medals—Class A, John Johnson; B, Stanley Fant; C, Graham Hereford; D, Donald Stover; E, Thomas Hollon.

Eastern tournament medal winners—Class A, Perry Karas; B, Stanley Fant; C, Alexander Papanicolas; D, Thomas Hollon; E, Schuyler Jackson.

Emblem winners, Easter tournament—Second place, William Mudd, James Walters, James Boback, Graham Hereford, Eugene Crozier and Haynes Hunter; third place, Ellis MacLeod, Daniel Hollon, John Parham, Homer Gilliam and Justin Baum.

Handball ladder tournament—Charles Gay.

Big Field Vies In Track Events

Approximately 985 boys will compete in the annual Department of Playgrounds elementary school track and field meet at Central Stadium today. The first race, 70-pound dash, is scheduled to start promptly at 10 o'clock.

These boys have won their way to the finals in eight elimination sectional meets during the past three weeks, and each represents the very best in the city in his event. Competition will be held in the 70, 85, 100 and open classes in broad jumps, standing and running; dashes, high jumps; throw for accuracy and relays.

Adams School is defending champion and with a strong group of qualifiers is expected to repeat its victory march. Strong contenders will be Park View and Wheatley.

Arlington Plays.

Yarosz and Abrams Meet at Stadium June 6

Teddy Yarosz, former world middleweight champion, and Georgie Abrams, District novice who has shown some flashes of ring permanence, will headline the town's next fight show at Griffith Stadium. They will meet in a 10-round bout on June 6.

Representatives of both yesterday signed contracts with Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn of the fistic firm of Turner & Ahearn. Yarosz is to receive a guarantee of $1,200, while Abrams will fight for 12½ per cent of the gross.

Yesterday's signing ceremonies came after the usual bickering period, during which matchmaker and managers went through the pleasant, though trite, ring pastime of haggling over terms. It was said that Ray Foutts, astute keeper of the Yarosz money bags, was demanding $1,500 for his boy's services. The equally astute, and rotund, Ahearn finally closed the deal after a dramatic trip to Philadelphia. It could have been Oshkosh or Oskaloosa with the same effect.

No sooner had Foutts agreed to terms when the Ahearn publicity agents insisted that a great battle was on between the matchmaker and Syd Fishel, manager of Abrams. Now Mr. Fishel is known hither and yon as a gentleman possessing a goodly portion of that something called common sense. Hence, after the proper "bickering" Fishel accepted Goldie's 12½ per cent ultimatum."

Ahearn is said to have "guaranteed" Abrams an opportunity to meet Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele here this summer if Georgie would be a nice boy about this Yarosz fight. Abrams, who has won 19 of his 20 fights but who is still rated by ring sharps as a Johnny-come-lately of unproved ability, is said to have snapped at the chance.

This Yarosz fellow, by the way, will be something different for Abrams. He is not likely to fall over when the local Jewish lad blows a hot pastrami breath into his face, and will, in all probability, be still erect after many of George's vaunted punches have been rained about his blond Polish thatch.

Teddy is a good looking young fellow, who doesn't like to have his hair mussed during a fight. He is probably the most accomplished boxer in the middleweight division, although his punch is said to be slightly less than deadly. The lad figures, on paper, to box the ears off Abrams.

The City's Scholastic Golf Champions From Gonzaga Prep School

Armour Tops In Best Ball

He and J. Thompson Beat Dudley, Laffoon.

Toledo, Ohio, May 27 (AP).—Tommy Armour, the "Silver Scot," scored four birdies on a five-hole stretch today as he and long-driving Jimmy Thomson registered a one-up victory over Ed Dudley and Ky Laffoon in the second round of the fourth annual $4,600 Inverness Invitational best ball matches.

Dudley and Laffoon however, topped the standings with a "plus 5" rating as the result of the six-hole margin piled up in the first round on Lawson Little and Jimmy Demaret.

Armour, his irons working to perfection, pulled the match out of the hole after he and Thomson were two down at the turn.

The other matches finished like this:

150 Princeton Grads Attend Banquet Here

About 150 persons, including Eugene Meyer, president of the Yale Club, and Robert Richard O'Brien, president of the Harvard Club, were guests at the annual spring banquet given by the Washington chapter of the Princeton alumni last night at Chevy Chase Club.

Ted Weiman, head football coach at Princeton, was principal speaker and sketched briefly his prospects for a winning team this season. Declaring his material unusually good, though a little green, Weiman said he expected a successful season in spite of a difficult seven-game schedule which includes Navy, Yale, Harvard and Dartmouth.

The Princeton football schedule was announced as follows: October 1, Williams; 9, Dartmouth; 16, Pennsylvania; 23, Rutgers; 30, Harvard; November 12, Yale; 17, Navy.

Sharkey Wins Medal In Scholastic Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Buddy Sharkey, Gonzaga's top-heavy favorite in the Metropolitan schoolboy championship, won the medal in expected fashion with a three over par 73 yesterday over the lengthened Georgetown Prep School course. Out in 38, the Indian Spring club champion played the nine-hole layout in par 35 on the return trip.

Two strokes behind the medalist was Harold Kelly, of St. Johns, with a 75, while Ray Burgess, Bethesda, and Ralph Bogart, Wilson, had 77; Earl Skinker, Wilson, 78, and Karl Kuster, Rockville, and George Vass, Western, 79's.

A five-way playoff at 82 for the last place in the championship flight found Jim Thompson, Montgomery Blair star, gaining a berth on the fourth extra hole. Thompson and Don Simmons, of Roosevelt, tied with par 4's on the first hole, eliminating Buscher, Blair; Drury, Alexandria, and Rita, Wilson. They halved the second and third holes in bogey 5-4 and Thompson won on the fourth, aided by a fine second shot from the deep rough that found the green. Simmons was short in two and missed a 4-foot putt for a half.

Charles Sullivan, finalist last year against Bobby Brownell, failed to make the championship bracket with an 84, while Bobby Suit, Roosevelt captain, with an 83, and Bob Rita, who lost in the playoff, were other major casualties.

The city-championship Gonzaga team placed only one man in the first flight, Sharkey. Central, near the cellar in the Scholastic League standings, placed four men in the match play rounds, while Western and Wilson qualified three each.

The medalist played first seven holes in regulation par figures but trapped his tee shot on the eighth and three-putted the ninth after missing the green with his second and finished with a 6 and 38.

His back nine of 35, lowest of the day, was manufactured from seven pars, making his total for the day, 14, a birdie, from the 15-foot putt on the thirteenth, and a bogey on the fifteenth, where he again three-putted.

Sharkey meets Bob Donohue, Wilson, in the first round feature today, while other outstanding matches are Kelly, of St. John's, against Holmes, Central, and Bogart, Wilson, opposing Ellis, also of the Mount Pleasant school.

The tournament was the first played over the Garret Park course since the layout has been lengthened to 6,090 yards and boasts four new holes. The quarter-finals will be played this afternoon and the semi-finals and title round tomorrow. The winner will receive The Washington Post trophy for a year and a replica for permanent possession. Ralph Fowler, District Golf Association head, will make the presentation Sunday afternoon.

Men's Tennis Meet Opens

Battle for Title Is Seen an 'Open' Affair.

Barney Welsh, the District's No. 1 player last season, will not be on hand to defend his title this afternoon as the City of Washington tennis tournament gets under way on the Edgemoor courts at 2 o'clock.

In the absence of the "Rockville Rambler," who has ruled local courts for years, and also Dooley Mitchell, ranked second to Welsh, the tournament is expected to be wide open.

Hugh Lynch, third ranking performer of the District, has been seeded No. 1 and established as favorite to win the Star Cup. Other seeded players follow in order of rank: Lieut. James Farrin, Frank Shore, Allie Ritzenberg, Ray Stocklinski, Lieut Stan Robinson, Billy Contrea and David Johnsen.

Unseeded but strong entries include Ricky Willis, Columbia Country Club champion; Melvin Tarpley, runner-up in the Public Parks championships last season; Bob Brasted, captain of C. U.'s team; Ralph (Buddy) Adair, Bill Buchanan, Mariano Erana and Don Garber, of Edgemoor, and such public parks players as Pat Deck, Hugh Trigg, Elwood Hooffecker, Maurice Goubeau, Joe Baker, Fred Doyle, Bob Bradley and Charles Heacock.

Lieut. Jimmy Farrin and Oscar Steinhauser, Carlyle McKibbin and Ricky Willis, Lieut. Stan Robinson and Stuart Wyeth, W. P. Thompson and Bill Buchanan, Ray Stocklinski and Dewitt Smith, Jr., and Ken Dalby and Ralph Adair drew first-round byes, but are scheduled to play each other in the second round Sunday.

Navy, Army Teams Meet In 4 Sports

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, May 27.—Army raiders will try to bomb the Navy on the diamond, and track here tomorrow, while Navy shore parties will attempt to blast the Army on lacrosse fields and tennis courts at West Point.

The parties passed each other today, Navy's lacrosse squad of 26 and its 10 tennis men leaving Annapolis at 7:30 this mornint, and the Army tracksters, 36 in number, with 18 baseball players, reaching the Naval Academy about 2:30 this afternoon.

The track men will start at 10 tomorrow morning, and the other events, consisting of golf with Pennsylvania, rifle with the Seventy-first New York regiment and between the Plebes and McKinley High, will also start early, leaving the afternoon for the baseball game, which starts at 2:30 p. m.

Should the Navy win the lacrosse game, it will be the undisputed leader among the college teams. Army undoubtedly has one of the best college teams this year and Navy is not far behind. In track, also, the service school teams are up among the leaders.

Bob Davis, who has pitched five games for Army and won them all, will undoubtedly be on the mound, with Andy Lipscomb, another winning twirler, in reserve. Jerry Bruckel has the call for Navy, with Jimmy Madison as second choice.

The umpires will be from the American League this year, Bill Grieve and Eddy Rommel.

None of the games tomorrow can change the lead in a series. Army leads in baseball by 18 to 12 and in track by 8 to 3. Navy has won six lacrosse games to the Army's 3, with one tie, and has won both tennis matches which have been played.

Miss Moore Wins; Enters Title Round Of Tennis Tourney

Sara Moore, No. 1 seeded player, reached the final round of the women's singles in the City of Washington tournament yesterday, turning back Willie O'Steen after a tense struggle at Army and Navy. The scores were 6—2, 10—8.

The second semifinal round match scheduled between Winnie Suttie and Margaret Robinson was postponed due to the illness of Miss Suttie and probably will be played Tuesday. The date for the finals is undecided at this time.

Miss Moore, public parks star, took the first set from her more youthful rival in fairly easy fashion, but the latter buckled down and played fine tennis in extending her to the limit in the clinching set. At 5—4, Miss O'Steen three times had set point on her service and once held a 40—0 lead, but Miss Moore rallied, deuced the game and won out.

The count rocked back and forth and was deadlocked three times—at 6—6, 7—7, 8—8—before Miss Moore broke her rival's service and took the match on the eighteenth game.

Glen Echo's Pool Will Open Today

One of the familiar faces to be seen at Glen Echo pool, which open for the season at noon today belongs to Boyd Hickman, former star at George Washington University, who is starting his fifth year as director of the pool.

Hickman has surrounded himself with a group of more recent collegiate athletes, who will serve as life guards. In this group are Ted Cottingham, G. W., '38; Harvey Sechler, former captain of the Florida swimming team; Elmer Hogg, G. W. football end last season; Allen Holt, a back on the same eleven; LeRoy Brooks, Arthur Nowasky, both of G. W., and John Bowman, Maryland University, all of the class of '39.

Eastern Nine Clinches Tie For Crown

Beats Anacostia, 5-4, in 12-Inning Series Game.

Eastern High School's nine clinched at least a tie for the Inter-High series crown yesterday by nosing out Anacostia, 5-4, in a well-played 12-inning game on the field at Eastern Stadium.

Anacostia, which has been shoved around by every club in the series, struck back against the favored Lincoln Parkers, who have only the Tech game remaining to mar an undefeated season, but just could not muster enough batting power to shove across the deciding run.

Rip Carver, after allowing one run in the first, pitched until two men were out in the seventh before being relieved by Walter Stockwell. The wildness of Carver, who had deposited three of the Indians on the bases, and the timely hitting of the Lund-coached team sent three runs across the plate and Carver to the showers. Meanwhile, though, Carver had fanned eight and was not doing a bad job.

Stockwell, with the bases loaded, caused Gordon to pop out to the shortstop. From here on the same Stockwell did not allow a single run, only issued one base on balls and struck out nine to turn in a masterful bit of relief twirling. The win was the fifth straight for Eastern and sent the Indians deeper into the cellar position.

It should have been mentioned earlier how the winning tally was scored, but it was nothing for Eastern to brag about. Kidwell sent Stockwell to second on a single after two were out in the twelfth. Lewis followed with an infield bingle that moved Stockwell to third. At this point Treadway hit to the shortstop and on a close play at second base Lewis was called safe, Stockwell scoring with the game-winning run.

Favor War Admiral In Suburban Race

New York, May 27 (AP).—War Admiral, originally scheduled to meet Seabiscuit in the $100,000 match race Monday, will tangle instead with eight other turf rivals in the $20,000 Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park tomorrow.

The odds are 4 to 5 the little Admiral from Samuel D. Riddle's barns will be in front at the end of the 1¼ miles journey, just as he has been in his last ten races.

He hasn't trailed another horse home since he finished second to Bottle Cap in his last 2-year-old start in 1936. Eight victories last year, including the coveted triple crown, and two this season, one of them the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup, boosted his earnings to $231,625.

Celtic Legend Scores Second Straight Victory at Charles Town

Miss Epe Runs Third in Feature; Crowd of 5,000 Attends.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 27.—Celtic Legend, making her second start of the meeting, made it two straight victories by winning the White Hall, the day's feature event at this turf point. With Apprentice Jockey B. Hacker aboard, the Sir Andrews fillly overcame poor racing luck to win by three lengths the field of six competing at six and a half furlongs. Celtic Legend was installed a $3.20 favorite and ran accordingly, the crowd buying so many tickets that extra numbers had to be brought into action.

The race was run over a heavy, sloppy track and Celtic Legend recorded time of 1:25 2-5. However, there was no rain and conditions were comfortable for the 5,000 who reported for the sport.

Celtic Legend broke in a tangle but once clear came around to battle for the lead with Miss Epe. The latter tossed in the sponge at the far turn and Hacker took the ultimate winner out to a clear lead. Ado then replaced Miss Epe as the "No. 1 chaser" but could not whittle down Celtic Legend's advantage.

Macie Margaret, a fair sort on the Maryland tracks, was sent postward as an odds-on favorite in the first race but had to be hard driven to stave off Engle's Lad, a first time starter, which was beaten a neck. Asterisk was third in the field of seven. Macie Margaret, in the colors of C. B. Sturm, paid $3.80.

The second race brought a new low for the meeting in winning prices when Happy Chase paid a mere $2.80 mutuel. She was much the best, however, coming from far back to gain contention and then saved ground to win with ease. Clell, Rock, which ran out at the final turn, was second ahead of Alby the pace setter.

Canynge, a $9 shot, capably handled by Jockey Palumbo accounted for first money in the third race. The ancient son of Chatterton came through between horses approaching the stretch and ran away with his opposition coming to the wire. Gee Sharp shook off Great Loss and Mantados but could not cope with the winner, operating in the silks of Mrs. M. E. Brining.

Blond Reel put the favorite players back in business in the fourth race, winning with the greatest of ease to pay a $4.40 mutuel. High Explosion was second, beaten five lengths, with Boulderman third. Only six competed.

Legenda Annexes Iroquois Purse

Churchill Downs, May 27 (AP).—Legenda, claimed three days ago from Woolford Farms, made good at the first asking for her new owner, Racing Commissioner C. L. Croan, when she easily outdistanced a field of six in the Iroquois Purse, today's 6-furlong feature dash.

Taking the lead soon after the break, the daughter of Insco, sire of Lawrin, the Kentucky Derby winner, breezed in front to the stretch, where she withstood the challenges of Gentry Brothers' Play Dis and B. C. Carpenter's Candescent in order to win by three lengths.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACIE MARGARET, $3.80, $2.60, $2.40; ENGLE'S LAD, $3.20, $2.60; ASTERISK, $2.40.

MACIE MARGARET, off well, was rated along with ENGLE'S LAD to stretch, but had to be put to pressure in closing stages. ENGLE'S LAD had good speed from start, raced on outside of winner and closed with good energy. ASTERISK saved ground and had no excuses. REAL JEANS could not threaten. MOHONGO tossed rider before break and showed dull effort.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:07. Off 3:10. Winner. Mrs. Claude Feltner's b. f. (3), by Happy Argo—Lonesome Melody. Trained by C. Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:56 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY CHASE, $2.80, $2.40, $2.40; CLELL ROCK, $5.00, $3.80; OH ALBY, $5.00.

HAPPY CHASE, off poorly, was rushed up on inside to better position, saved much ground entering stretch and won with speed in reserve. CLELL ROCK followed pace of OH ALBY to turn, ran wide at final bend and finished far out. OH ALBY had good early speed and weakened. LEADING WAYS went evenly. The others were not prominent.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:41. Winner, Miss M. E. Brining's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANYNGE, $9.00, $4.40, $2.80; GEE SHARP, $3.20, $2.40; MANTADOS, $2.40.

CANYNGE saved strength when outrun, came between horses to better position with a bold rush, took command and drew out. GEE SHARP ran GREAT LOSS into defeat, shook off challenge of MANTADOS, but could not resist winner. MANTADOS weakened. GREAT LOSS was through after three furlongs. RUNNING WATER could not keep up.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:07½. Off 4:10½. Winner, W. W. Gift's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACIE MARGARET, $3.80, $2.60, $2.40; ENGLE'S LAD, $3.20, $2.60; ASTERISK, $2.40.

MACIE MARGARET, off well, was rated along with ENGLE'S LAD to stretch, but had to be put to pressure in closing stages. ENGLE'S LAD had good speed from start, raced on outside of winner and closed with good energy. ASTERISK saved ground and had no excuses. REAL JEANS could not threaten. MOHONGO tossed rider before break and showed dull effort.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:07. Off 3:10. Winner. Mrs. Claude Feltner's b. f. (3), by Happy Argo—Lonesome Melody. Trained by C. Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:56 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY CHASE, $2.80, $2.40, $2.40; CLELL ROCK, $5.00, $3.80; OH ALBY, $5.00.

HAPPY CHASE, off poorly, was rushed up on inside to better position, saved much ground entering stretch and won with speed in reserve. CLELL ROCK followed pace of OH ALBY to turn, ran wide at final bend and finished far out. OH ALBY had good early speed and weakened. LEADING WAYS went evenly. The others were not prominent.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:41. Winner, Miss M. E. Brining's ch. g. (8), by Chatterton—Fancy Light. Trained by P. Poluch. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANYNGE, $9.00, $4.40, $2.80; GEE SHARP, $3.20, $2.40; MANTADOS, $2.40.

CANYNGE saved strength when outrun, came between horses to better position with a bold rush, took command and drew out. GEE SHARP ran GREAT LOSS into defeat, shook off challenge of MANTADOS, but could not resist winner. MANTADOS weakened. GREAT LOSS was through after three furlongs. RUNNING WATER could not keep up.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:07½. Off 4:10½. Winner, W. W. Gift's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOND REEL, $4.40, $2.80, $2.20; HIGH EXPLOSION, $5.20, $3.00; BOULDER DAM, $2.40.

BLOND REEL, sent through close quarters to get to front at first turn, opened a long lead and won as rider chose. HIGH EXPLOSION, shuffled back at first turn, raced wide and showed good effort. BOULDER DAM went evenly. INDIANA weakened in closing test. HYDRANGEA was pulled up sharply when squeesed back going to first turn.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. The White Hall. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:37½. Winner, Mrs. U. Webb's b. f. (4), by Ed Crump—Monoplay. Trained by E. B. Webb. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25 2-5.

Parker Named New President By Bond Club

George M. Ferris Vice President and Frank M. Hall Secretary-Treasury.

After the annual outing and dinner of the Washington Bond Club, held yesterday afternoon and evening at the Manor Country Club, Chauncey G. Parker, jr., partner in Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, members of the New York Stock Exchange, was elected president for the ensuing year to succeed L. Clark Brown, a member of the investment banking firm of Brown, Goodwyn & Olds.

Mr. Parker has been vice president for the past year and is succeeded by George M. Ferris, of George M. Ferris & Co. Frank M. Hall, of Hall, Peters & Bryson, was elected secretary-treasurer.

As retiring president, L. Clark Brown will be on the club's board of governors. J. Clifford Folger, of Folger, Nolan & Co., will be a new governor, succeeding Thomas J. Montgomery, who has been a member since he was president of the club.

T. Baker Robinson, of G. M.-P. Murphy & Co., was chairman of the nominating committee, and Myles H. Quail, of Y. E. Booker & Co., was general chairman of the outing, assisted by Harold Patterson, Edson B. Olds, T. Baker Robinson, C. C. Alles, Fenton Cramer, Austin Rohrbough and Munford Ellis.

Heads Bond Club

Market Closings Today and Monday

New York, May 27 (AP).—Local commodity futures markets, with the exception of cotton and wool tops, will begin a three-day Memorial Day week-end tomorrow. The New York Stock Exchange and the Curb will open for trading, reversing last year's action in extending the holiday. The New York Produce Exchange will deal in spot grains and provisions. Markets outside New York, without exception, will do business on Saturday.

On Monday, Memorial Day, traders will look to Europe, Canada and the South for market news. Virtually all domestic exchanges will suspend business. Cotton will be dealt in at New Orleans and naval stores at Savannah and Jacksonville.

Duplicating Directors Resign 23 Posts

Twenty-three officials of the Associated Gas and Electric System have resigned from interlocking corporation directorates, a Federal power commission hearing disclosed yesterday. The hearing had been called to determine whether public and private interests were adversely affected by the interlocking positions.

Twenty-four officials were summoned but one has since died, it was announced. Power commission attorneys noted that the resignations were dated after the hearing was called.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended May 21 as approximately 5,150,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 7,397,000 tons; 1936, 6,819,000 tons.

Cotton Breaks $1.50 Per Bale

New York, May 27 (AP).—After breaking $1.25 to $1.50 a bale early today under further heavy liquidation and foreign selling, cotton recovered most of its losses. October, which had sold off to 7.83, rallied to 8.05 and closed at 8.04, with final prices 4 to 7 points lower.

All deliveries eased below 8 cents and to the lowest levels since November, 1937, under an early wave of selling which carried the market off from initial losses of 11 to 15 points to net declines of 24 to 29 points before the selling pressure abated. At the lows, prices were off $4.00 a bale or more for the week, but at these levels the market recovered in a series of nervous price movements to close at practically the best for the day.

Futures Price Range.

	High	Low	Last
July	8.03	7.81	8.01-02
October	8.05	7.83	8.04-05
December	8.08	7.85	8.07-08
January	8.08	7.85	8.07-08
March	8.12	7.92	8.12
May	8.15	7.95	8.15

Spot quiet; middling, 8.01.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was easier today under further liquidation and commission house selling, promoted by the easiness of most of the allied markets. Final prices were 7 to 9 points net lower. Sales, 251 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; July closed 7.65, September 7.63, October 7.50, December 7.45, January 7.46.

Trading by Members 19 Per Cent of Total

Round-lot transactions of New York Stock Exchange members in the week ended April 30 were 19.47 per cent of total exchange volume, the Securities Commission reported today.

Round-lot volume for that week on the stock exchange was 2,670,010 shares, or 7 per cent larger than volume reported on the ticker.

Department Store Sales.

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended May 21 were 14 per cent lower than in the corresponding week last year. In the week ended May 14 sales were 16 per cent below last year.

Wheat Drops With Outlook For Big Yield

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 27.—Flattering domestic crop conditions, together with reports of improved European agricultural prospects, did much today to pull Chicago wheat prices down, 1⅛ cents maximum. Harvest weather in this country was ideal.

Suggestions were current that one specialist here would estimate the United States winter crop at more than 800,000,000 bushels. Another unsettling factor was a sudden transient tumble of 3½ cents a bushel, at Liverpool, to season new record bottom levels.

Reason given for the abrupt Liverpool price downturns included talk of fresh bearish figures on big crop production in the United States, together with good rains ending drought in parts of Australia. An added burden here was that North American export business remained at almost the vanishing point.

Chicago wheat futures closed ¼ to ⅞ under yesterday's finish; July, 72@72⅛; September, 73⅜@73½; corn, unchanged to ¼ lower; July, 56⅜; September, 57¾; oats, ⅛@½ off; rye, ⅝@¾ drop, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to 5 cents advance.

The Market

Stocks Continue Decline but Rally Near Close; U. S. Bonds Irregular.

New York, May 27.—Stocks lost further ground in moderately active trading and closed with losses of a point or so in leading issues, which rallied somewhat in the final hour. Sales again were around 750,000 shares. Government bonds were mixed. July wheat lost ¾ of a cent at 72⅛ cents a bushel.

Stocks most of the day could show numerous cases of mild advance, but the general tone was one of struggle against selling. At the worst a number of leading stocks fell below prices at which they have shown considerable resistance. Bot. Steel and Bethlehem sank below 40, but they were hard to move there. Nickel got down close to that mark. Coppers were a trifle steadier, in spite of general expectation of another cut in the metal. Most of the railroad stocks were weak.

Motors had no rallying power, but they did not go down more than a fraction. Preferred stocks were thin. Among those to drop heavily were International Silver, Wilson, West Penn Electric, Maytag and Bethleham Steel. Common shares to fall 2 points or more were Monsanta Chemical, Cash Register, Universal Leaf Tobacco, Columbia Carbon and Starrett.

Uncertainty.

Markets again were confronted with a mixture of news that had in it some good ingredients, but that had a rather sour taste as a whole. Strike news from Akron was a reminder that the press on falling industrial profits on wages always brings resistance and loss and postpones such readjustments as inevitably have to be made. The TVA inquiry contained some basis for hoping that the Government might have to revise its public utility policy in a manner which would slow down the sweep toward destruction of private interest. The promise of the President to air his views on the tax bill, which presumably will become law caused some anxiety. Business has now come to expect nothing constructive from Washington without an accompaniment of Parthian shots.

Railroad freight car loadings last week turned out to have increased a little over the preceding week, but the total was far below a year ago. The Federal Reserve Bank reported department store sales in this district in the first three weeks of May at 11 per cent lower than in the same period of 1937 and said "there appears to have been a continuation of the gradual decline that has been in progress since January." The reduction and omission of dividends continued.

Were there less politics and war alarms confronting business, the prospect for heavy crops this summer and autumn would virtually insure a good pickup in business. Conditions being what they are, too much hope cannot be placed upon that factor, but at least it will tend to bring on a breathing spell, which might be prolonged if spending increases rapidly—although the aftermath of that will be another setback.

Co-operation.

Chairman Douglas of the SEC gives a clear view of how the policeman's mind works. He was reported as saying that the stock exchange's step, in applying to odd lot trading the latest SEC ruling on short sales of full lots, was the first he knew where an industry under Government regulation took steps itself independently to buttress a Federal ruling. If the latest step taken by the stock exchange was designed, as Mr. Douglas seems to assume, to strengthen the SEC's ruling because of the inherent weakness of the latter, then it must also be assumed that the original SEC ruling (requiring a short sale to be made at a price in advance of the last previous price) was intended to shop short selling. The SEC did indeed announce its measure as one to "prohibit" short selling, but that was merely a rhetorical flourish; what it meant, as it went on to say, was that short selling in a falling market would be made more difficult.

Sincerity.

To take position No. 1—namely, that the SEC's objective was to stop short selling—the case looks peculiar. In that case, why did not the SEC simply say that short selling henceforth would be prohibited, or, at least, apply to all transactions, common, preferred, full and by, the higher price requirement? Position No. 2 is that the SEC on its first ruling merely intended to do what the stock exchange (before the SEC came into existence) already had done when it required short sales to be made at no lower a price than the preceding price—apply the brakes slightly to the short seller and at the same time give the public the impression that much was being done to end the iniquity of the short sale. In any event, since the stock exchange began the business years ago, there would be more justice in the claim that the SEC, rather tardily, tried to buttress with its high authority the independent action of the stock exchange, an action taken, incidentally, before a New Deal party on the stock exchange had bobbed up.

Practical.

The SEC, through Chairman Douglas, now is hinting, it would appear, that the stock exchange ought to give the short sale screw additional turns now and then, until everything is tight. Actually, the SEC ruling on full-lot short sales threw so much short selling into odd-lot channels that the odd-lot brokers found themselves unable, or unwilling, to carry all the stock they had to take, lacking a ready market to protect their position by selling in full lots at approximately the same prices. This latest step hadn't any reform in it; it was merely a matter of convenience and safety for the odd-lot broker. For that matter, the previous steps, official and otherwise, hadn't any reform flavor either; they came out of the bottle of political expediency.

Technical.

The stock market has a good many followers who religiously study the "averages" and base their operations upon the Dow theory of trading. It was said that yesterday afternoon, when the averages broke a certain point (110 or thereabouts), the signal was given to sell. Breaking the line acted as a stop loss order for many traders on this side and increased the sales in the closing hours. When the information had gone round further this morning, further selling took place. A group of traders in London are particularly zealous converts to the Dow theory of trading.

General Electric.

The market for General Electric has been anticipating another cut in the dividend. After the news of a reduction from 30 cents to 20 cents a share was announced this morning the shares were hovering at a small fraction under the previous closing price of 30⅜. Another small fraction was lost on the news, after which the stock held steady for a while around 30½. Apparently it is the policy of General Electric directors not to anticipate too much, but to keep the quarterly dividend rate close to the shore of profits. Business presumably had deteriorated to about the extent of the dividend cut, although the tendency of the board naturally would be to play as safe as possible without too much pain for stockholders.

Gold Strike Rumor Kites London Stock

London, May 27 (AP).—New rumors of a rich gold strike caused a scramble today to buy Western Holdings and sent the stock to a new high of 21 shillings ($5.25). Western Holdings was formed more than a year ago by Sir Abe Bailey to look for gold in Orange Free State, South Africa. The stock sold at three shillings (75 cents) a month ago and closed at 17 shillings nine pence ($4.43) yesterday. The new price put a £2,400,000 sterling (about $12,000,000) valuation on the company's £575,000 sterling ($2,875,000) capital.

N. Y. Names 41 Stock Dealers In Trust Fraud

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 27.—State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., today took court action against 41 individuals and corporations, including the big stock exchange firm of Paine, Webber & Co., and its partners, charging an attempt, with international ramifications, to fraudulently drain a group of investment trusts of their marketable assets.

Bennett asked, in a bill of complaint containing 64 allegations, and supported by 60 pages of affidavit by Assistant Attorney General John R. O'Hanlon, that all the defendants be barred permanently from dealing in securities in New York State.

Temporary Injunction.

State Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman signed a temporary three-way restraining order and set June 7 for a hearing at which the defendants were ordered to show cause why the permanent injunctions should not be granted.

The Paine, Webber firm, along with members of the firm of Prentice & Brady, former members of the stock exchange, were restrained, pending the scheduled hearing, from:

Advancing funds to finance transfer of control of any investment trust, or Purchasing or selling securities from the portfolio of any investment trust, without formal consent of all interested parties.

A statement by the Paine, Webber firm pointed out this did not prevent other dealings in securities while the temporary restraint was in effect.

"Syphon Liquid Assets."

O'Hanlon's allegations charged:

"Repeated operations of one or more groups of individuals acting through common agents in acquiring control of security investment trusts, financing purchase of control out of the portfolios of the trusts themselves, and then proceeding to syphon out the trusts' liquid assets by substituting for marketable securities in their portfolios various unmarketable securities, including in particular the stocks of certain Canadian corporations organized or controlled by the defendants themselves."

The complaint and affidavit charged that groups operating from Boston and from Canadian cities had thus figured in the affairs of six American trusts, in which the public had invested more than $16,000,000.

The trusts named were First Income Trading Corporation, Continental Securities Corporation, Reynolds Investing Co., Inc., Insurance Shares Corporation, of Delaware, Bond & Share Trading Corporation, and Burco, Inc.

A second group of defendants was restrained until the June 7 hearing from dealings in any securities in New York State. This group includes Leo Solomont, Boston attorney; Jerome C. Brady and Sartell Prentice of Prentice & Brady.

The third temporary restraint until June 7 applied to four of the investment trusts, their officers and directors and certain individuals, forbidding them from dealing in the securities of these trusts.

SEC Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission announced yesterday that it would hold public examinations of seven investment companies. The hearings, which will be held in connection with its study of investment companies, will start June 2 at the commission's New York office. The companies are Continental Securities Corporation; First Income Trading Corporation; Administered Fund, Second, Inc.; Reynolds Investing Co., Inc.; Insuranshares Corporation of Delaware; Bond and Share Trading Corporation, and Burco, Inc.

The examination also will cover certain transactions of other companies "with which the above-mentioned corporations had affiliations or in which they were interested," the commission said. Among the latter group the commission said, are:

The Barkley-Grow Aircraft Corporation, Fiscal Management Co., Ltd., Corporate Administration, Inc., Northern Fiscal Management Co., Ltd., Calmur & Co., Inc., Delta Oil Co., Ltd., and Northern Capital Holdings Co., Ltd.

Capital Transit April Income Above Year Ago

The Capital Transit Co. in its report yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission showed a net income for April of $68,048.63, which compares with $34,829.84 in April, 1937, an increase of 95 per cent.

Operating revenues for the month totaled $995,994.41 compared with $955,208.34 for April a year ago. Operating expenses, taxes and depreciation amounted to $872,658.46, which compares with $867,104.10 for April last year, an increase of $5,554.36.

Operating income last month was $123,335.95 compared with $88,104.24 for April, 1937, an increase of $35,231.71, and gross income totaled $127,270.19. Deductions amounted to $59,221.57.

For the first four months of 1938 the company reported a net income of $84,034.63 which compares with a net of $32,315.95 for the first four months in 1937, an increase of 160 per cent.

Operating revenues for the period were $3,731,087.16, an increase of $84,050.46, and operating expenses totaled $2,700,001.49, a decrease of $75,815.59.

Operating income for the four months, after deductions for taxes and depreciation, amounted to $309,481.70, an increase of $64,439.

Chesapeake & Potomac Tel.

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for April amounted to $949,345, and operating expenses for the same period were $661,850, according to Charles A. Robinson, general manager. In April a year ago, operating revenues were $951,428 and operating expenses were $667,081. Taxes for the month were $91,046, or $8,814 more than in April, 1937, and interest deductions amounted to $33,126, resulting in a balance before dividend of $168,674, as compared with $181,828 a year ago.

For the first four months of this year operating revenues were $3,751,495, compared with $3,712,233 in the same 1937 period, and operating expense of $2,684,259, compared with $2,615,015 last year. For the four months the balance before dividend was $606,745 this year, compared with $693,908 last year.

The cost of telephone plant in service at the end of April was $43,027,676. There were 230,884 telephones in service on April 30, 1938, which was an increase of 993 telephones over the previous month. Telephone users in Washington made 26,356,000 calls during the month, or an increase of 44,000 calls over April, 1937.

Structural Steel Orders at 1938 High

New York, May 27 (AP).—April bookings for fabricated structural steel of 92,130 tons reached the highest figure for any month thus far in 1938, the American Institute of Steel Construction reported today, an increase of 7,873 tons over the previous month's revised figure, but 66,341 under the comparable 1937 year. April bookings represented 39.4 per cent of normal (the 1928-31 average).

April shipments of 93,935 tons compared with 103,300 in March, 146,788 a year ago and represented 40.2 per cent of normal.

Lead Cut to 4 Cents, Lowest in 3 Years

New York, May 27 (AP).—Leading producers today cut the price of lead from 4.25 cents to 4 cents a pound, establishing the lowest level in three years.

So far this year the price has ranged from 4.90 to 4 cents. In March, 1937, the metal was quoted at 7.75 cents, the highest since 1929.

Woman Mental Patient Bites Three, Is Quelled

Privates J. P. Miller, 48, and G. W. Millis, 34, of the Second Precinct, were bitten yesterday when they attempted to arrest a 50-year-old mental patient. She bit a young colored man, Irving Lewis, when he went to the aid of the officers.

The woman was sent to Gallinger Hospital.

Long Beach

Does Not Claim the Best of Everything

We do, however, invite and urge everyone seeking a summer home location to visit Long Beach and investigate before purchasing elsewhere.

You Will Find

LONG BEACH, located on the open Chesapeake Bay, not on an inlet, river or creek. It has a safe, natural sand beach, equally attractive to bathers and swimmers. Sensible building restrictions are rigidly enforced. Level beach lots, wooded knolls, rolling hills, and a few cliff lots make individual home treatment easy.

You will also find good fishing and crabbing. The residents are fine comrades and good neighbors. Drive down and get acquainted. Maryland Route 4 to 416 to 2 will bring you direct to entrance 8 miles south of Prince Frederick. Office at water's edge.

Bob Burns Says—

I haven't anything against fortune tellers or anybody else that I don't know any more about that I do them. If I did, I wouldn't be tippin' 'em off that Hollywood is such a rich field for their line of work.

The other day, out here, an actress announced her engagement to a fella who she'd only known for a week. When her friends told her she was takin' some awful chances, the actress says "Oh, no I'm not—I wouldn't go into marriage recklessly like that—I've consulted seven palmists and they all say it's all right."

Jewry Is Urged To Return to Own Culture

Jews of the world must find the road back to their people, and to the culture and the traditions with which they have been identified since Biblical times, Dr. Samuel Dinin, president of the educators' group of the National Conference of Jewish Social Welfare, declared last night in an address at the Willard.

"I say to all Jews—including quarter Jews—subject to fascist oppression that the only road to dignity and self-respect is the road back to their people," said Dr. Dinin.

"The only way to travel this road is through a process of Jewish education and re-education. Young and old must go to the fountains of Jewish learning and lore and get from them sustenance and strength to enable them to face the world fearlessly and unafraid as Jews."

Bankrupt, he said, are theories of assimilation. Jewish education must be provided not merely for refugees, but also for the masses of Jewish adults and children in America, he declared.

Miss Miriam Ephraim, of Pittsburgh, president of the National Association of Jewish Center Workers, called upon all center workers to help imbue the Jewish community "with loyal devotion and consecration to Jewish life, to democracy, and to the cause of helping create a better world for all."

The conference will continue today, with leaders in Jewish cultural life discussing the problems and solutions to the handicaps which beset the world and the modern Jew.

Class Eulogizes Youth Buried on Graduation Date

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 27.—Eulogy to Claude Lewis Timberlake, 17, who was buried yesterday afternoon, was read by his class president, Clyde E. Smith, jr., at graduation exercises for 149 students at Martinsburg High School last night.

The diploma will be given to the family of the boy who was fatally injured Monday afternoon while hunting groundhogs with a brother. The brother mistook Claude's head for a groundhog, and fired, causing instantaneous death.

Md. Board Picks Jessups as Site For Women's Jail

Baltimore, May 27 (AP).—The State board of welfare decided today to locate its proposed new prison for women on a 225-acre tract at Jessups, Anne Arundel County, about a mile from the Maryland House of Correction.

Harlod E. Donnell, State Prison superintendent, said after the board's meeting that approximately $250,000 was provided for the building in State bonds to be sold August 15. An additional $200,000 may be obtained from the PWA, he said.

The new institution, which will provide quarters for about 75 women prisoners now in the House of Correction, will be entirely independent of the latter prison and will have its own warden and supervisory staff.

D. C. Urges Caution on Autoists On Memorial Day Week-End

City on Way to Setting All-Time Safety Record for 1938, Traffic Director Van Duzer Declares; Ten Precautions Are Outlined.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

With Washington well on its way toward an all-time traffic safety record, District officials yesterday warned against recklessness over the Memorial Day week-end.

Deaths, injuries and accidents are on the decrease. Only two persons—both pedestrians—have been killed this month. The year's fatality toll is 17 behind 1937—a total of 31 deaths, compared with 48 this time last year.

But Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer is "keeping his fingers crossed." There is one more barrier to clear this month—the coming week-end, conceded to be one of the most dangerous of holiday periods.

With the exemption of one 30-day period this year, every month has shown a fatality drop compared with the corresponding month of 1937. In April, deaths jumped to 9, compared with 4 last year. The average decrease was 6.

Newspaper publicity, rigid enforcement and daily broadcasts from Traffic Court are mainly responsible for the improvement, Van Duzer said. He urged motorists to exercise care this week-end.

And to Washington motorists who plan to enjoy their Memorial Day holiday on the open road, The Post gives ten safety rules prepared by the Bureau of Standards:

Keep on your own side of the road and in your own traffic lane.

Never exceed a speed from which you can stop safely within the clear distance you can see ahead. At night, this distance is limited to the field clearly illuminated by your headlights. Don't outdrive your lights.

At night when you meet a car that is standing still with its headlights on, slow down and keep well away from it. If your own car is standing still, depress your lights.

Avoid doing the unexpected yourself. Don't pull out from the curb, cross from one traffic lane to the other, turn or stop without making sure the way is clear.

At railroad crossings, look both ways before crossing, and if there are two or more tracks, look out for moving trains temporarily hidden by standing cars or other trains. The fact that one train has just passed is no indication that there will not be another.

Train yourself not to try to get back on the paving at once if for any reason your wheels run off the shoulder of the highway. Slow down until you can get back safely.

Look ahead and avoid trouble by anticipating it.

And to those who have friends planning a motor trip, safety exponents suggest this farewell:

Page School Issue Legality Is Upheld

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., May 27.—In a friendly suit in Circuit Court here, Judge H. W. Bertram dismissed an injunction plea seeking to restrain the sale of $65,000 school bonds in the Springfield District.

Clayton Fox, a Springfield lawyer, brought the suit with the consent of the Page County School Board to test the legality of the voted issue on three points: 1—that the bonds called for furnishings as well as building the schoolhouse; 2—that there was no approval of the issue by the Board of Supervisors; 3—that the due date of the bonds did not conform with the statutes.

Cobb, Lawyer, Sues to Retain Job at Howard

Former Judge Blames Removal to Disagreement With Johnson.

James A. Cobb, prominent colored lawyer, yesterday asked the District Court to issue an injunction to restrain Howard University from removing him as a professor of law.

Cobb, former judge of the Municipal Court and a friend of Theodore Roosevelt, told the court that the board of trustees had ordered his services terminated as of June 30. He said in his petition that the board gave as its reason that he had appeared before a Congressional committee in opposition to Howard University appropriations.

Cobb, who began teaching law at Howard in 1919, made public a letter he wrote to T. L. Hungate, chairman of the board of trustees, explaining the circumstances under which he appeared before a Senate committee to oppose a $3,000 item for the salary of a new field agent.

He said he did not go before the committee on his own initiative, but was summoned to appear after the executive committee of the Howard Alumni Association had given his name to the Senate committee.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard, was engaged in a controversy with the alumni association, the letter said, and it was felt that Johnson wanted a field agent to take over the functions of the alumni secretary and go around the country "and build a defense for himself."

In his petition to the court, which was filed by Attorneys George D. Horning, jr., William E. Leahy and George A. Parker, Cobb said that the Howard board of trustees had ordered his services terminated without specifying charges, without affording him reasonable notice and without granting him a chance to be heard. This, he said, was in violation of the university's rules and regulations.

Cobb's suit is one of several that have been filed against Howard University or Johnson in recent years. Meantime there have been many out-of-court controversies that have made for turmoil at Howard. In 1935 Department of the Interior agents investigated charges of communism at the university. Last year the General Alumni Association made vehement accusations against Dr. Johnson, printed them in its journal, and had this distributed at a banquet.

Court Plan Opponent Quits as Mo. Law Dean

St. Louis, May 27 (U.P.).—Dr. William Edward Masterson today announced his resignation as dean of the law school at the University of Missouri, charging that "a small but noisy group of politically minded lawyers" had constantly sought to meddle in the school's affairs. It was believed his resignation was a direct repercussion of his opposition before the Senate judiciary committee in April, 1937, of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan.

Howard Trails A.F.L. Partisan In Typographical Union Voting

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, May 27.—Woodruff Randolph, secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union, tonight announced unofficial returns of the I. T. U. election had been received from half the 900 local unions.

Randolph's figures in the presidential race gave Claude M. Baker, of San Francisco, 26,309 votes and Charles P. Howard, of Chicago, who sought re-election, 16,219.

The I. T. U. is affiliated with the A. F. L. Baker favored adherence to A. F. L. policies. Howard is secretary of the C. I. O.

Randolph said tabulations on other candidates were as follows:

Secretary-treasurer — Woodruff Randolph, 21,460; Harry B. Schaudt, 20,213.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night sent congratulations to Claude M. Baker, who apparently had defeated Charles P. Howard for presidency of the International Typographical Union.

Although Howard had not yet conceded to Baker, the A. F. of L. head felicitated the union on "removing from control of your organization a termite president who sought to bore from within and destroy an outstanding American Federation of Labor union."

"A few more such moral victories as that of Baker in the I. T. U. election, and the Pennsylvania primaries and the C. I. O. will be wiped off the map," said Green.

DRIVE DOWN TO THE Shenandoah Valley
IN A GOOD USED CAR
Join the line of motorists that take this delightful trip week-days and week-ends. But don't look out of place in an antiquated car. Especially since good used cars are now selling at such attractively low prices. Look at the used cars in today's Post if you want some class.

We've suggested Annapolis, the Shenandoah Valley . . . Monticello . . . Gettysburg. Now, at the new low prices on late model cars—you can take the trips this week-end and all summer. Turn to the want ads and see the cars advertised.

Mallory Panama

Are you one of the thousands of men who has been so used to a felt hat that you are skeptical about a panama? If you are, then here's the solution. A smartly shaped Mallory Panama that fits and looks as well as your felt hat. The only difference is that you'll hardly know you have a hat on your head. Come in today for a distinctive Mallory Panama for over the holiday week-end. And if it showers they're "Cravanetted" rain spot proof.
